ITALY ASKS U. S. TO RECALL ITS ARMY ATTACHE

WASHINGTON, April 9—Italy has demanded the immediate recall of Capt. William Bentley, as assistant American military attache and assistant military attache for air at Rome, in retaliation for the American government's action in demanding the recall of Admiral Alberto Lais, the Italian naval attache in Washington, the State Department announced today.

The demand for Capt. Bentley's recall was made in a note delivered to the State Department by the Italian embassy.

The note said further that Admiral Lais has ceased his functions as naval attache in this country in response to the American government's request and added that he would leave the country immediately.

At the same time, the embassy informed the American government that Rome considered Captain Bentley persona non grata and requested that he be withdrawn immediately from Italy.

Diplomatic relations between Italy and the United States may reach a "definitive crisis" some time this month, informed quarters in Rome predicted today.

These circles pointed out that anti-American sentiment in Italy is now rising "strongly and steadily" for the first time since Italy entered the European war.

(Editor's Note: Reports from Washington said American authorities anticipated strong protests from both Italy and Germany over President Roosevelt's intimation yesterday that the United States may requisition the 30 axis ships recently seized in American ports.)

'SITDOWN' HITS ALUMINUM FIRM AT CLEVELAND

CLEVELAND, April 9—A sit-down strike broke out at the "L" plant of U. S. Aluminum Co. today after CIO officials earlier had ended a 13-hour strike in another unit of the aluminum plant.

Meanwhile CIO officials stopped the "wildcat" strike at the Ferro Machine & Foundry Co. when employees voted to return to work.

Alex Balint, union representative, said 1,000 men had laid down their tools when aluminum plant officials refused to meet with CIO representatives to arrange for collective bargaining.

Company spokesmen said, however, that men in the plants, numbering "several hundred" are "engaging in the sitdown stoppages of work on orders from the outside and many of them say they are getting tired of it."

INDICTED MEN ENTER DENIALS

Numerous Pleas Of Not Guilty Heard During Arraignment

Appearing before Common Pleas Judge Meeker Terwilliger, Wednesday, on three indictments for assault and battery, twenty-year-old Merle Ankrom, 140 York Street, pleaded not guilty to all three counts and was held at $200 bond on each count.

Ankrom made no comment to the court concerning the charges, filed against him by W. M. Dalton, William Hitchcock and Frank Heeter, all of Circleville, who claimed they were attacked by Ankrom two weeks ago as they were walking along the Norfolk and Western railroad tracks.

John T. White of Clarksburg, W. Va., alleged to have passed a $3,200 check on the Pickaway County Livestock Association in payment for 156 hogs, pleaded not guilty during the arraignment and was returned to county jail after his bond had been set at $1,000.

Two Circleville youths, Merle Garrett, 17, and his brother Robert, 20, entered guilty pleas before the court on charges of having stolen miscellaneous articles from automobiles, stores, and private dwellings in Circleville and Ashville. They were caught by Ashville officers as they attempted to break into automobiles parked near the Ashville school house.

Inlur Denial

The youths' brother-in-law, William Inlur, 27, charged with the possession of the property stolen by the Garrett brothers, entered a plea of not guilty and Judge Terwilliger set his bond at $500. He was committed to County Jail in default of payment.

Following their arrest the Garrett brothers told police and sheriff's officers they intended to start a second-hand store in Columbus with the stolen goods.

Henry Ford Adkins, Circleville, pleaded guilty to carrying brass knuckles, was fined $25 and costs and sentenced to 30 days in jail, the jail sentence suspended on good behavior.

Clayton Taylor and Kenneth Brunson, both of Columbus, charged with burglary and larceny of grain in Scioto Township, both waived reading of the indictment and were held on $500 bond each. Bond was expected to be furnished.

Rube Matthews, Kentucky, indicted on two charges of forgery, pleaded guilty to both charges, after (Continued on Page Four)

LOMBARDI LOSES $300, AND CRAFT'S CAR LOOTED

CINCINNATI, April 9—Two members of the world champion Cincinnati Reds today were bemoaning their bad luck.

After Ernie Lombardi had reported to police that a sneak thief had robbed him of $300, Harry Craft reported that his automobile had been looted south of Covington, Ky., and three bags of clothing stolen.

Lombardi's wallet was "stolen" when the team was in Louisville yesterday.

TWO key cities in the news since the Hitler-directed blitzkrieg started in the Balkans are Salonika and Fiume, the former in Greece and the latter in Italy. War reports declare that the Nazi legions have blasted their way through the Greek defenders into Salonika, while other rumors say that Yugoslavian units have taken over Fiume. Salonika's population is 263,526, while Fiume has 49,199 residents. Salonika is shown in the larger photo.

European Bulletins

BERLIN — Today's German communiqué credited Field Marshal Sigmund Von List with the Nazi successes in three days of warfare against Yugoslavia and Greece, including breaching of the Metaxas line which exposed Salonika. The communiqué also announced "fire blitz" on Coventry, new ship losses by the British, the capture of Derna and said the British raid on Kiel caused mostly civilian casualties and damage.

BASLE, Switzerland — The Swiss federal council voted to create a Swiss merchant marine today to sail under the Swiss flag for the duration of the war.

SOFIA — The first of 7,000 Yugoslavian officers and soldiers captured in the German offensive arrived in Sofia today, the newspaper Douma reported. The paper said the captives included many Bulgarian Macedonians who suffered from "nervous hysteria" as a result of attacks by German Stuka dive-bombers.

OSLO — Norway will not become a German protectorate or part of the Reich, Major Vikdun Quisling, chief of the German-controlled government, told a mass meeting today. He said the future of Norway will depend on "Norway's good will."

BUDAPEST — Greek defense forces and civilians have been totally evacuated from Greecean Thrace, the Bucharest newspaper Curentul reported today. The paper said 1,000,000 civilians have been transferred from Thrace to other sections of the country.

SOFIA — Residents of Sofia were advised by the official Bulgarian radio today to remain in their homes unless it was absolutely necessary to go outdoors owing to the danger of new air attacks.

LONDON — Bulgarian troops participated in the German attack on Yugoslavia, a Reuters (British) dispatch from Ankara, capital of Turkey, charged today. The dispatch gave authoritative quarters in Ankara as the source of its information.

DYNAMITE IN COAL PILE HAS OFFICIALS GUESSING

AUBURN, N. Y., April 9 — Agents of the Federal Bureau of Investigation were called in to investigate today when a stick of dynamite was found in a coal pile at the International Harvester Company plant.

Coal shipments to the plant are handled by two companies. Workmen shoveling the coal into a melting oven discovered the dynamite.

No explanation has been advanced as to how the explosive reached the coal supply, or whether the dynamite was placed in the coal before or after shipment to the plant.

GREEK RESISTANCE REPORTED CRUMBLING IN FACE OF BLITZ

COVENTRY BLASTED AGAIN BY GERMANS

LONDON, April 9—Many persons were reported killed and injured last night and early today when Nazi raiders gave Coventry a second "fire-blitz" almost equal to the destructive German assault several months ago.

Reports from the bomb-ravaged industrial midlands center said the first waves of German raiders dropped thousands of incendiary bombs and that these were followed by innumerable high explosive missiles of the heaviest calibre.

Many homes and shops that escaped the first attack were destroyed. Today rescuers were searching through great piles of fresh debris for the dead and wounded. Among the buildings wrecked during the night were a hospital, a hotel, a school and a police station.

Ambulances were kept busy rushing injured victims to nearby hospitals.

While the Nazis hammered Coventry and attacked widespread areas in other parts of Britain, RAF bombers pounded Kiel, German naval base and port which has been used for construction of U-boats, the Air Ministry announced.

Six Nazi Planes Downed

Six German planes were shot down by British anti-aircraft guns and fighters during the night, the Air Ministry said.

An official communiqué describing last night's German aerial attacks said:

"The main attack of enemy aircraft last night was directed against the midlands. The raid lasted several hours and in one town (later identified as Coventry) considerable damage was done.

"Casualty information is not yet available but it is feared casualties were heavy.

"Bombs were dropped on a number of other districts in the south-east and near the south coast. In two towns on the south coast there were a small number of casualties and some damage."

London experienced its 538th air raid alarm of the war, marked by spasmodic gunfire as raiders roared swiftly over the capital. The all-clear signal sounded at 4 a. m.

BERLIN, April 9—German air raids on Britain yesterday and last night formed one of the most comprehensive aerial offensives yet staged by the Luftwaffe and caused alarms throughout almost the entire British Isles, German authorities announced today.

At the same time it was stated that strong RAF formations attacked cities along the northern German coast during the night, dropping bombs on residential quarters and damaging several buildings, including two churches.

Some civilians were killed and (Continued on Page Four)

BRITISH TO GET 10 COAST GUARD BOATS FROM U. S.

WASHINGTON, April 9 — The White House today announced that the United States is turning over 10 coast guard cutters to Great Britain under the lease-lend program.

To be used to help strengthen the British navy's defenses in home waters, the vessels will be manned by British crews on the American side of the Atlantic before crossing. Presidential Secretary Stephen T. Early announced.

He described the cutters as of the "1928-1932 type," but declined to reveal their names.

Transfer of the coast guard vessels represented the latest move in a series of swift measures being taken by the American government to rush aid to Great Britain and the axis-defying nations of the Balkans before, as one high official put it, "it is too late."

1,800 GET MORE PAY

CANTON, April 9—The Hercules Motors Corp. today announced a 10-cent-an-hour wage increase for its 1,800 employees, bringing the minimum hourly wage to 71½ cents an hour.

BRITISH REPORT MASSAWA FALL

Last Italian Stronghold In
Eritrea Taken; deGaulle's
Men Lead Attack

LONDON, April 9—British troops have taken the port of Massawa, virtually the last important stronghold in Eritrea, it was understood in London today.

The "Free French" forces of Gen. Charles De Gaulle formed the spearhead of the British attack on Massawa, it was learned. The exact status of operations in North Africa was not known. Latest advices said the British were falling back to prepared positions east of Derna in Libya.

WAR TODAY

Gravest Doubt Held
That Nazi Drive
Can Be Halted

By Captain John H. Craig
U. S. Marine Corps, Retired

The April Armageddon in the Balkans which this column repeatedly predicted during the last two months has burst into roaring war on a thousand-mile front.

The forces of the democracies are facing a concentration of military power such as the world has never before seen. Whether or not they can stop it is a question open to gravest doubt.

The Nazi Fuehrer's ultimate objective is Egypt, Britain's strategic crossroads of empire. If he gets Egypt the Mediterranean will fall into his lap. Then any campaign to oust him from Europe and Africa will face appalling difficulties.

The German juggernaut already has won advantages of considerable strategic importance in the Balkan fighting. Nazi armored divisions have knifed through Juma Pass, occupied Skopje, and swept southward into Salonika. Pouring through Dragoman Pass further north, the Nazis also have taken Nish, another strategic South-Yugoslav city.

Skopje is a strategic spot to watch. The Nazi hold on that city must be broken. A second spot worth watching is western Thrace where Nazi Panzer divisions have forced their way down the Masta River to the Aegean sea, cutting off Greece from land communication with Turkey.

ADMINISTRATION AGAINST ANY CENSORSHIP ACTION

WASHINGTON, April 9—A positive statement came from the White House today that President Roosevelt and all of his immediate aides are definitely opposed to compulsory censorship of the press.

Presidential Secretary Stephen T. Early, in further urging voluntary cooperation on the part of newspapers, press associations and radio in refraining from the report of certain military information emphasized that his approach "is an attempt to avoid censorship."

Many Soldiers Caught In Trap

Berlin Says Contact Made On Albanian
Soil With Duce's Units; Defending
Armies Split By Reich's Attack

LONDON, April 9—Vital Salonika has fallen to German arms and Great Britain must again look to the defense of Egypt, Prime Minister Winston Churchill told a hushed House of Commons today.

ATHENS, April 9—Thousands of hastily reinforced Greek "suicide battalions" were reported still holding out in Macedonia early this afternoon despite a staggering German thrust against Salonika.

(Editor's Note: Berlin announced and London conceded that Salonika had fallen.)

Greek troops were reported stubbornly resisting on the few points of contact left to them in Thrace and elsewhere in the east.

BERLIN, April 9—The vital Aegean seaport of Salonika fell like a ripe plum into German hands today as the climax of a series of new Nazi military successes throughout the Balkans in the last 24 hours.

Large forces of Greek troops trapped between the Vardar River and the Turkish frontier have offered to surrender, it was said.

At the same time, swift shock formations of the German mechanized army swept to the Albanian frontier from Skolpje, capturing the towns of Tetovo and Prilep and "joining hands" with Italian formations in Albania, it was said.

Twenty thousand troops and many officers, including six generals, have already been taken prisoner by German forces in Yugoslavia, it was announced.

On the eastern Greek front, German units crashed through to the Aegean at the port of Xanthe, 125 miles east of Salonika, it was said.

The Vardar River in Yugoslavia was crossed by German forces which later made a junction with the Italians, according to military sources.

Incredibly fast westward drives from captured Skolpje and Nish in Yugoslavia enabled a motorized German spearhead to reach the Albanian border, probably in the vicinity of Koritnik.

Defenders Split

Thus, on the fourth day of the Balkan war, Germany and Italy have already flung up a wall of mobile steel splitting Yugoslavia from Greece, leaving the dangerous water route as the only line of communication between them.

There were few details of the apparently successful Nazi assault through the Rupel Pass of the Struma Valley which blasted the supposedly impregnable fortifications built by the late Premier Gen. John Metaxas.

It was said, however, that mobile armored troops, protected by Stuka dive-bombers, had succeeded in breaking through despite stubborn Greek resistance.

At the same time, military headquarters for the first time revealed an attack by German forces on Sunday at the famed iron gate of the Danube, just west of the Romanian frontier.

In the face of stiffest resistance, the Germans broke through the iron gate, where Yugoslavs previously had sunk concrete-laden barges in an effort to tie up all river traffic, and then started a march to Belgrade.

British Say Empire Troops Not In Action

LONDON, April 9—Despite heroic Greek resistance, the vital Aegean seaport of Salonika has fallen into German hands, it was learned on reliable authority in London today.

The vanguard of swift-moving mechanized Nazi troops which shattered the Struma Valley forts under a veritable ceiling of Stuka dive-bombing planes, has begun entering Salonika.

Despite all reports to the contrary, it was said in authentic sources that British Imperial Forces in the Balkans have not yet been engaged against the attacking Germans.

While the loss of Salonika came as a shock, it will be recalled that on Monday International News Service London dispatches predicted early abandonment of this seaport as well as all of Western Thrace.

The Anglo-Greek strategy calls for an eventual defense line from Zana on the Adriatic, through Tepeleni in Central Albania and thence to the Gulf of Salonika.

Reliable disclosure that the British are not yet engaged came after (Continued on Page Four)

The April Armageddon in the Balkans which this column repeatedly predicted during the last two months has burst into roaring war on a thousand-mile front.

The forces of the democracies are facing a concentration of military power such as the world has never before seen. Whether or not they can stop it is a question open to gravest doubt.

The Nazi Fuehrer's ultimate objective is Egypt, Britain's strategic crossroads of empire. If he gets Egypt the Mediterranean will fall into his lap. Then any campaign to oust him from Europe and Africa will face appalling difficulties.

The German juggernaut already has won advantages of considerable strategic importance in the Balkan fighting. Nazi armored divisions have knifed through Juma Pass, occupied Skolpje, and swept southward into Salonika.

Pouring through Dragoman Pass further north, the Nazis also have taken Nish, another strategic South-Yugoslav city.

Skolpje is a strategic spot to watch. The Nazi hold on that city must be broken. A second spot worth watching is western Thrace where Nazi Panzer divisions have forced their way down the Mesta River to the Aegean sea, cutting off Greece from land communication with Turkey.

ADMINISTRATION AGAINST ANY CENSORSHIP ACTION

WASHINGTON, April 9—A positive statement came from the White House today that President Roosevelt and all of his immediate aides are definitely opposed to compulsory censorship of the press.

Presidential Secretary Stephen T. Early, in further urging voluntary cooperation on the part of newspapers, press associations and radio in refraining from the report of certain military information emphasized that his approach "is an attempt to avoid censorship."

100 Nazi Divisions Remain In Soviet Border District

Russians Becoming More Cool To Hitler And His Aspirations

NEW PACT EXPLAINED

Fuehrer Decides To Give Restless Man Action Despite Grain Loss

By Drew Pearson, Robert Allen
WASHINGTON, April 9 — Few people outside the general staffs of Europe realize that Hitler has steadily kept 100 divisions along the Russia border—apparently on guard against his own friend and alleged ally.

One hundred divisions is a total of about 1,500,000 men, which is far more than Hitler has concentrated in the Balkans. This, and other things, indicate the growing coolness between Stalin and Hitler.

Among the other things are Russia's almost complete failure to deliver oil in anything more than dribbles to the German army, plus her failure to come across with promised food shipments.

Also it is obvious that Hitler's drive on Salonika is nothing more or less than an attempt to fill the old Bismarck dream of a Berlin-to-Bagdad railway, which means, of course, seizure of the Straits — Russia's outlet to the Mediterranean.

All of which explains the friendship pact suddenly signed between Russia and Yugoslavia.

Restless Nazi Troops

Hitler was leaning over backward to avoid war in the Balkans in order not to spoil the grain crops of Yugoslavia and Bulgaria, which he needs for food. But the Balkan campaign had at least one advantage for him.

He was able to shift restless Nazi troops from France and the Low Countries.

German troops primarily are home-bodies — much more so than the British. And while excellent fighters, they go stale when merely on police duty. British intelligence reports from France indicate that German occupation troops had become very restless, and Hitler was glad to shift many of them to active service.

Nazi Funds

One squeeze play U. S. officials are holding up their sleeve to use against Germany is the heavy Axis investment in the United States.

Germany has $106,000,000 in this country, tied up in subsidiary companies, short term investments, bank deposits and long term loans. Italy has $104,000,000 in similar U. S. investments.

And the State Department is keeping quiet about a plan to seize these investments if Germany should retaliate against the United States for seizing Axis ships.

Incidentally, most people don't realize that it is still possible for Americans to send money to Germany whereas the funds of France, Norway, Denmark, Holland, and Belgium are frozen.

One typical result is that the big perfume dealers in France now sell far more cosmetics to Germany than the United States. The French can have no financial transactions with the United States, but because Nazi funds are not frozen, the perfume manufacturers can get their money from Germany which in turn sells to the United States.

Sportsmen as a group are not technically trained in managing wildlife resources, according to conservation authorities, who contend that many sportsmen's activities need technical advice and direction to be of the most benefit to wildlife. With so much available energy in the local community, conservation officers believe more thought and effort should be given to directing willing groups in channels where wildlife and real conservation would benefit directly. Some of the projects which Pickaway County farmers and sportsmen might employ to increase the food and cover available for wildlife include: 1. Plant suitable duck foods in marshes; 2. Plant native trees and shrubs for improving wildlife environment; 3. Assist private landowners in planting hedgerows separating cultivated fields. These become travel ways and cover for game and act as windbreaks against erosion; 4. Improve streams by developing pools and building fish shelters; 5. Construct fish ladders over dams in small streams; 6. Plant natural vegetation to furnish food and cover for fish and wildlife; 7. Operate small cooperative fish rearing ponds for stocking local streams and lakes; 8. During emergency winters construct feeding, watering and shelter stations for (a) waterfowl, by feeding wheat, corn and other grains when the birds are caught in freeze-ups, (b) upland game birds when snow, ice and sleet cover their natural foods; 9. Promote respect for game laws and regulations by reporting to proper authorities violations and 10. Provide training in the safe and proper use of firearms.

The Pickaway, Saltcreek and Perry Township Conservation Clubs are carrying on predator control projects. Each club had divided itself into two groups and the work continues as a contest.

Bluebird houses put up by boys and girls in the county have been occupied in as short a time as five days.

Small food patches for game birds, song birds and game animals are being planted by many farmers and landowners in the county. The patches run in size from a quarter of an acre to an acre. About twenty acres of such plots have been planted, conservation officers report.

The Walnut Township high school conservation club will build 15 squirrel dens and 57 bird houses this year. The club has cared for six squirrel feeding stations and a large number of feeding stations for game birds and game animals. Three food patches will be planted by members of the club.

Open season on black bass will close the last of April and remain closed until June 16th. The law protects the fish during their spawning season.

A few bluegills are being caught in the canal, Game Protector Clarence Francis reports. Fishing generally this spring has been poor.

A few more reverses, and the Nazis will be complaining about how unfair it is for everybody to jump onto them.

vances in the Balkan conflict said that the German mechanized legions have separated Greece from Yugoslavia.

This was accomplished after the German troops crossed the Vardar River and advanced beyond the important Yugoslavian center of Skoplje, which was captured yesterday.

Twenty-thousand Serbian troops have been captured in the fighting thus far, the announcement said.

Croatians Quiet

(Editor's Note: Messages received in Budapest from Sofia stated two Croatian battalions and three batteries surrendered to German forces during action around the Yugoslavian city of Strumica.

(According to this message, the Croatians gave up "without a fight" after killing their Serbian officers.)

The high command still significantly refrained from revelation of the precise advances made by German forces in the Balkans, but all indications were that these gains are increasing and that decisive military events are imminent.

German quarters said German forces in southeastern Europe soon will register military triumphs in the Balkans equal to those gained in Poland, Scandinavia and France earlier in the War.

Reports in Berlin claimed that the British forces in Greece are withdrawing from Salonika to "avoid a battle with the Germans" but that the latter are "pressing forward at top speed to compel the British to stand and fight."

It was believed in Berlin German strategy will be to concentrate on development of the famous pincer maneuvers in several regions, in an effort to encircle the main enemy, forces and then "hammer them into wholesale surrender" in the phrase of Berlin quarters.

The first sign that a full-scale German blitzkrieg is developing in Yugoslavia and Greece was seen in German hints today that German and Italian forces have succeeded in establishing contact at the Albanian frontier.

They predicted that the fall of Belgrade is near and that another German column in Yugoslavia is pushing from the north past Marburg toward Agram (Zagreb).

These same sources said that German seizure of several roads and railway junctions and important river points in southern Serbia was an accomplishment of utmost strategic importance and had laid a foundation for a "Serbian debacle" comparable only to the rout of Poland's armies in the Polish Corridor.

OCEAN DRAGGED FOR EIGHT MEN

Wreckage Of Navy Plane Located; Two Victims Recovered

NORFOLK, Va., April 9—The destroyer Lansdale today continued dragging the Atlantic about 20 miles northeast of Cape Charles, Va., for more bodies of the 10 officers and men who plunged to their death in a Navy PBV-1 patrol bombing plane.

Two unidentified bodies and part of the plane's wreckage, were brought to Norfolk by the destroyer last night. Navy Hospital officials said that no identification could be made until fingerprints are checked.

Recovered wreckage of the plane, which spun into the sea Tuesday near Great Machipongo inlet on a flight from Norfolk to Quonset Point, R. I., was placed under immediate inspection by naval authorities attempting to find a clue as to the cause of the plane's crash.

With the main structure of the plane submerged under 40 feet of water, Lt. Julian Bolt, aide to the navy yard commandant, said that "we have given up all hope that any one who was aboard is alive."

Scattered bits of wreckage found over nearly a square mile of water indicated that the plane struck with terrific force, breaking up immediately. Wreckage returned to Norfolk included a pontoon, a life raft, two landing wheels, a pair of trousers and a mattress.

Navy officials said, however, the fact that one life raft was found inflated could indicate that the men had attempted to get out of the plane after it crashed.

The plane was piloted by Ensign G. N. Blackburn, naval reserve, Lenni Mills, Pa., with Ensign G. W. Marson, naval reserve, Cambridge City, Ind., as co-pilot. The crew was T. F. Mueller, San Diego; F. W. Crowe, Boulevard Heights, Md.; L. C. Sutton, Little Cypress, Ky.; L. Gurganus, Parish, Ala.; W. Broadhurst, Albany, N. Y.; F. McElrath, Newburgh, N. Y.; S. A. Taylor, Rutledge, Ala., and A. P. Fassano, Port Washington, N. Y.

WALTER McDILL, 78, DIES; RITES WILL BE FRIDAY

Walter McDill, 78, died Tuesday at 4 p. m. in University Hospital, Columbus. Mr. McDill, who had been residing with his son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Dwight Rector of Saltcreek Township, entered the hospital Monday, undergoing a major operation Tuesday from which he never rallied. He had been in failing health for several months.

He was born July 28, 1863, in Wayne Township, the son of James and Nancy McCollister McDill. He lived until five years ago on the farm on which he was born. He was the youngest and the last survivor of a family of eight children. His wife, the former Elizabeth Leist, died in 1916.

He leaves three children, Russell, of Frankfurt; Mrs. Florence Stout, of East Franklin Street; Mrs. Laura Rector, Saltcreek Township, and three grandchildren, Joan McDill, Sara Jane and Dwight Rector Jr.

Mr. McDill was a member of Heber Lodge No. 501 of Williamsport and of Saltcreek Valley Grange.

Funeral services will be Friday at 2:30 p. m. at the Methodist Church of Williamsport with the Rev. Clarence Swearingen of the Third Avenue Methodist Church of Columbus officiating.

The Rev. Mr. Swearingen is a former pastor of the Williamsport church. Burial in charge of C. E. Hill will be in Springlawn cemetery.

BRITAIN DENIES TROOPS ACTIVE

The London Daily Express said that British troops already had encountered attacks to stem the German drive against Salonika.

This report, not confirmed from other sources, said the British have crossed the Greek border into Bulgaria and are battling the Germans there.

The Daily Telegraph said that Yugoslav troops in Albania advanced southward from Scutari and captured the Italian-held stronghold of Lesh.

According to reports from Ankara, the Telegraph added, a second Yugoslav column moving westward from Prizren is reported to have crossed the Albanian frontier.

Reuters (British) news agency quoted a Yugoslav communique as announcing:

"The situation is in our favor. On all fronts enemy attacks have been repulsed with the greatest vigor. This has been admitted even by enemy radio stations. Heavy losses have been inflicted on the enemy and our air force has achieved special distinction in encounters with the enemy."

Following the capture of Skoplje, vital key to the Vardar River Valley leading to the Greek port of Salonika, German troops in Yugoslavia were reported to have captured Nish, Yugoslavia's important railway junction, according to German quarters in Hungary, the London Daily Mail said.

Nish Evacuated

Nish was said to have been evacuated by Yugoslav forces before the Germans entered.

The Telegraph said it was estimated 30 German divisions are operating in the Balkans from Bulgaria and that still more Nazi divisions are operating from Hungary and Romania. This paper added that "more than 1,000,000 men are being flung into the campaign."

Reuters quoted the Vichy news agency as stating that German troops moving along the Danube from Bulgaria captured the Yugoslav town of Tetiye.

TWO AUTOISTS CALLED FOR RECKLESS DRIVING

Frank Gillian, Ashville Route 2, was in County Jail Wednesday after he failed to pay a fine of $10 and costs for reckless operation.

Charges were filed against Gillian by Allen Ankrom, Circleville, Route 1, who claimed his front fender was damaged in a collision with Gillian's car Saturday night at Main and Court Streets. Patrolman George Green, investigating officer, said Gillian hit the Ankrom car as he attempted to make a left turn from Court to West Main Street. Gillian's auto was not damaged.

Ned Delos Enoch, Whisler, paid a fine of $25 and costs in Justice of Peace B. T. Hedges court Tuesday for reckless operation on Route 23 south of Circleville. The charges were filed by State Highway Patrolman J. G. Edie, who reported Enoch had struck another car as he attempted to make a left turn.

6,222 COLLEGE STUDENTS DEFERRED FROM SERVICE

COLUMBUS, April 9—A total of 6,222 draft registrants in Ohio has been deferred as college students, Lieut. John J. Nolan, head of the classification division at state selective service headquarters announced today.

In a report covering progress of classification through the month of March, Nolan disclosed that $53,279 men have registered at the state's 330 draft boards and that 45 percent or 384,087, have been classified. A total of 25,756 have been accepted at induction stations and the number of Class 1-A registrants on hand totaled 15,049 as of April 1.

Only 48 cases of failure to register have been reported in the state, Nolan said, while 1,276 have failed to return questionnaires and 136 have failed to report for physical examinations.

EX-OHIO MAYOR KILLED

EAST LIVERPOOL, April 9—Charles F. Bough, 80, one-time mayor of East Liverpool, was dead today of injuries received last night when his automobile struck a telephone pole.

Can We Ignore Them?

In these days of severe distress abroad, we are apt to ignore the plight of those in our own country, city and state whose needs are as serious but perhaps not as spectacular as the needs of those in foreign lands. We speak of the thousands of children in the state of Ohio whose misfortune it is to be crippled. Their bodies are crippled from the weapons of disease, accidents or from the first moments of birth. Now through the annual nation-wide sale of Easter Seals, these crippled children appeal for the help and interest of the citizens of our own community and all they ask is an opportunity to live a happy, useful life—to share the same privileges afforded the physically normal children.

As Americans true to our fundamental American principles of equal opportunities, can we conscientiously deny realization of this principle to so large a number of our children whose only difference from other children is in their physical condition—paralyzed arm, leg or crippled spine. Pity and sympathy for the crippled child are not enough. Good medical care to make him as physically normal as possible. An education like other kids, recreation and companionship develop a socially adjusted personality, guidance in choosing a suitable vocation and training in that vocation and finally a fair chance to earn a living—these are the things that every child needs in the main that are taken for granted by the child whose physical condition is normal but for the handicapped child it is a different story.

The job of the Circleville and Pickaway County Crippled Children's Committee is to educate the citizens of our county and city to understand the rights and needs of the physically handicapped children and to see that they are provided so that in the handicapped child is an equal chance to develop mentally and physically and thus become a productive unit in the community. This work, carried on by this committee composed of leading representatives, lay and professional persons, is financed by the Annual Sale of penny seals at Easter time. The campaign is part of the nation-wide sale now in progress in thirty other states affiliated with the National Association for Crippled Children.

The purchase of Easter Seals by each of our citizens who can afford to do so will go a long way toward providing greater opportunity for the crippled child in our own city, county and state, as children that deserve an opportunity to become happy, helpful Americans.

As citizens we cannot afford to ignore their needs.

FRED C. CLARK, Chairman
Circleville and Pickaway Co.
Crippled Children's Committee

ing applied to the British Empire by Hitler's general staff came from North Africa today with the fall of Derna. This town was taken by the British Imperial army of the Nile, January 30, in the course of the drive that almost wrecked the Fascist army in Africa. After taking Derna, the British Nile army continued for about 150 miles further taking Bengazi and Agadebia.

This series of defeats at British hands nearly ruined Mussolini and it probably infuriated Hitler, as a two-pronged attack on Egypt had been an agreed plan of axis strategy discussed in technical magazines since about 1937. According to plan, Hitler's Nazis were to advance through the Balkans and the Near East, while Mussolini's Fascists were to furnish a punch along the Mediterranean from Libya.

Apparently, when the Fascist punch blew up the Nazis took hold and are now running the African as well as the Balkan war. How much they can advance beyond Derna will probably depend on how much of General Wavell's Nile Army has been moved across the Mediterranean to fight in Greece and Yugoslavia.

AIR CORPS SEEKING MEN TO FILL GROUND FORCES

injured by the British raids, a communique stated, adding that strong anti-aircraft fire prevented the RAF machines from hitting important objectives. Four British planes were said to have been shot down.

Fires started by German raiders last night, it was announced, were visible more than 30 miles. The high command said an important English south coast harbor and important industrial plants in the Midlands were attacked.

Several hundred planes participated in these raids, which lasted from dusk to dawn and which covered an area including important southeast and southwest coastal ports and even industrial centers in northern Scotland.

Two unidentified bodies and part of the plane's wreckage, were brought to Norfolk by the destroyer last night. Navy Hospital officials said that no identification could be made until fingerprints are checked.

Recovered wreckage of the plane, which spun into the sea Tuesday near Great Machipongo inlet on a flight from Norfolk to Quonset Point, R. I., was placed under immediate inspection by naval authorities attempting to find a clue as to the cause of the plane's crash.

With the main structure of the plane submerged under 40 feet of water, Lt. Julian Boit, aide to the navy yard commandant, said that "we have given up all hope that any one who was aboard is alive."

Scattered bits of wreckage found over nearly a square mile of water indicated that the plane struck with terrific force, breaking up immediately. Wreckage returned to Norfolk included a pontoon, a life raft, two landing wheels, a pair of trousers and a mattress.

Navy officials said, however, the fact that one life raft was found inflated could indicate that the men had attempted to get out of the plane after it crashed.

The plane was piloted by Ensign G. N. Blackburn, naval reserve, Lenni Mills, Pa., with Ensign G. W. Marson, naval reserve, Cambridge City, Ind., as co-pilot. The crew was T. F. Mueller, San Diego; F. W. Crowe, Boulevard Heights, Md.; L. C. Sutton, Little Cypress, Ky.; L. Gurganus, Parish, Ala.; W. Broadhurst, Albany, N. Y.; F. McElrath, Newburgh, N. Y.; S. A. Taylor, Rutledge, Ala., and A. P. Fasano, Port Washington, N. Y.

WALTER McDILL, 78, DIES; RITES WILL BE FRIDAY

Walter McDill, 78, died Tuesday at 4 p. m. in University Hospital, Columbus. Mr. McDill, who had been residing with his son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Dwight Rector of Salt Creek Township, entered the hospital Monday, undergoing a major operation Tuesday from which he never rallied. He had been in failing health for several months.

He was born July 28, 1863, in Wayne Township, the son of James and Nancy McCollister McDill. He lived until five years ago on the farm on which he was born. He was the youngest and the last survivor of a family of eight children. His wife, the former Elizabeth Leist, died in 1916. He leaves three children, Russell, of Frankfort; Mrs. Florence Stout, of East Franklin Street; Mrs. Laura Rector, Salt Creek Township, and three grandchildren, Joan McDill, Sara Jane and Dwight Rector Jr.

Mr. McDill was a member of Heber Lodge No. 501 of Williamsport and of Salt Creek Valley Grange.

Funeral services will be Friday at 2:30 p. m. at the Methodist Church of Williamsport with the Rev. Clarence Swearingen of the Third Avenue Methodist Church of Columbus officiating.

The Rev. Mr. Swearingen is a former pastor of the Williamsport church. Burial in charge of C. E. Hill will be in Springlawn cemetery.

PRIVATE'S BODY FOUND

SANDUSKY, O., April 9 — The death of Private James P. Clark, 22, whose body was found floating off Kelley's Island last Friday, was ruled a suicide today by Erie County Coroner E. C. Wiegand.

Wiegand said Clark deserted from Lantry Field, Colorado, and that the youth was "bored with life."

Patty Jean Hunt, infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alton Hunt (Irene Julian) of Laurelville, R. F. D., died Tuesday at 8 p. m. in Cherington Hospital, Logan. Pneumonia, followed by surgery for its relief, was the cause of death.

The child was born January 31, 1941.

The funeral will be Thursday at 2 p. m. in the Methodist Church of Tarrilton with the Rev. S. N. Root officiating. Burial in the Tarrilton cemetery will be in charge of the Defenbaugh Funeral home.

The London Daily Express said that British troops already had encountered-attacked to stem the German drive against Salonika.

This report, not confirmed from other sources, said the British have crossed the Greek border into Bulgaria and are battling the Germans there.

The Daily Telegraph said that Yugoslav troops in Albania advanced southward from Scutari and captured the Italian-held stronghold of Lesh.

According to reports from Ankara, the Telegraph added, a second Yugoslav column moving westward from Prizren is reported to have crossed the Albanian frontier.

Reuters (British) news agency quoted a Yugoslav newspaper as announcing:

"The situation is in our favor. On all fronts enemy attacks have been repulsed with the greatest vigor. This has been admitted even by enemy radio stations."

"Heavy losses have been inflicted on the enemy and our air force has achieved special distinction in encounters with the enemy."

Following the capture of Skopje, vital key to the Vardar River Valley leading to the Greek port of Salonika, German troops in Yugoslavia were reported to have captured Nish, Yugoslavia's important railway junction, according to German quarters in Hungary, the London Daily Mail said.

Nish Evacuated

Nish was said to have been evacuated by Yugoslav forces before the Germans entered.

The Telegraph said it was estimated 30 German divisions are operating in the Balkans from Bulgaria and that still more Nazi divisions are operating from Hungary and Romania. This paper added that "more than 1,000,000 men are being flung into the campaign."

Reuters quoted the Vichy news agency as stating that German troops moving along the Danube from Bulgaria captured the Yugoslavian town of Txiya.

INDICTED MEN ENTER DENIALS

though the Judge withheld sentence until further investigation. W. L. Wilson, Laurelville, held on two charges of issuing checks with insufficient funds, entered a plea of not guilty to both counts and was held under $500 bond for each.

Clifford Hamilton, Circleville RFD, indicted on a statutory offense, pleaded not guilty, his bond was fixed at $500 and he was returned to county jail.

Lester Hawks, Circleville, charged with operating a motor vehicle when under the influence of alcohol, entered a not guilty plea and was released under $500 bond. William S. Mounts, Circleville, indicted for the same offense, also pleaded not guilty, and was released under $500 bond.

John Wilke, formerly of Pickaway County, indicted on two charges of non-support, pleaded not guilty to both indictments and his bond was set at $500 on each. He was committed to county jail pending payment.

Others indicted by the grand jury during its session last week, among them Willard C. Thalgott, 24, Columbus, free under bond on second degree manslaughter charges, will be arraigned before the court Saturday.

TWO AUTOISTS CALLED FOR RECKLESS DRIVING

Frank Gillian, Ashville Route 2, was in County Jail Wednesday after he failed to pay a fine of $10 and costs for reckless operation.

Charges were filed against Gillian by Allen Ankrom, Circleville, Route 1, who claimed his front fender was damaged in a collision with Gillian's car Saturday night at Main and Court Streets. Patrolman George Green, investigating officer, said Gillian hit the Ankrom car as he attempted to make a left turn from Court to West Main Street. Gillian's auto was not damaged.

Ned Delos Enoch, Whisler, paid a fine of $25 and costs in Justice of Peace B. T. Hedges court Tuesday for reckless operation on Route 23 south of Circleville. The charges were filed by State Highway Patrolman J. G. Edie, who reported Enoch had struck another car as he attempted to make a left turn.

6,222 COLLEGE STUDENTS DEFERRED FROM SERVICE

COLUMBUS, April 9—A total of 6,222 draft registrants in Ohio have been deferred as college students, Lieut. John J. Nolan, head of the classification division at state selective service headquarters announced today.

In a report covering progress of classification through the month of March, Nolan disclosed that 853,279 men have registered at the state's 330 draft boards and that 45 percent or 384,087, have been classified. A total of 25,756 have been accepted at induction stations and the number of Class 1-A registrants on hand totaled 15,049 as of April 1.

Only 48 cases of failure to register have been reported in the state, Nolan said, while 1,276 have failed to return questionnaires and 136 have failed to report for physical examinations.

EX-OHIO MAYOR KILLED

EAST LIVERPOOL, April 9 — Charles F. Bough, 80, one-time mayor of East Liverpool, was dead today of injuries received last night when his automobile struck a telephone pole.

Can We Ignore Them?

In these days of severe distress abroad, we are apt to ignore the plight of those in our own country, city and state whose needs are as serious but perhaps not as spectacular as the needs of those in foreign lands. We speak of the thousands of children in the state of Ohio whose misfortune it is to be crippled. Their bodies are crippled from the weapons of disease, accidents or from the first moments of birth. Now through the annual nation-wide sale of Easter Seals, these crippled children appeal for the help and interest of the citizens of our own community and all they ask is an opportunity to live a happy, useful life—to share the same privileges afforded the physically normal children.

As Americans true to our fundamental American principles of equal opportunities, can we conscientiously deny realization of this principle to so large a number of our children whose only difference from other children is in their physical condition—paralyzed arm, leg or crippled spine. Pity and sympathy for the crippled child are not enough. Good medical care to make him as physically normal as possible. An education like other kids, recreation and companionship develop a socially adjusted personality, guidance in choosing a suitable vocation and training in that vocation and finally a fair chance to earn a living—these are the things that every child needs in the main that are taken for granted by the child whose physical condition is normal but for the handicapped child it is a different story.

The job of the Circleville and Pickaway County Crippled Children's Committee is to educate the citizens of our county and city to understand the rights and needs of the physically handicapped children and to see that they are provided so that in the handicapped child is an equal chance to develop mentally and physically and thus become a productive unit in the community. This work, carried on by this committee composed of leading representatives, lay and professional persons, is financed by the Annual Sale of penny seals at Easter time. The campaign is part of the nation-wide sale now in progress in thirty other states affiliated with the National Association for Crippled Children.

The purchase of Easter Seals by each of our citizens who can afford to do so will go a long way toward providing greater opportunity for the crippled child in our own city, county and state, as children that deserve an opportunity to become happy, helpful Americans.

As citizens we cannot afford to ignore their needs. FRED C. CLARK, Chairman Circleville and Pickaway Co. Crippled Children's Committee —Adv.

ing applied to the British Empire by Hitler's general staff came from North Africa today with the fall of Derna. This town was taken by the British Imperial army of the Nile, January 30, in the course of the drive that almost wrecked the Fascist army in Africa. After taking Derna, the British Nile army continued for about 150 miles further taking Bengazi and Agadabia.

This series of defeats at British hands nearly ruined Mussolini and it probably infuriated Hitler, as a two-pronged attack on Egypt had been an agreed plan of axis strategy discussed in technical magazines since about 1937. According to plan, Hitler's Nazis were to advance through the Balkans and the Near East while Mussolini's Fascists were to furnish a punch along the Mediterranean from Libya.

Apparently, when the Fascist punch blew up the Nazis took hold and are now running the African as well as the Balkan war. How much they can advance beyond Derna will probably depend on how much of General Wavell's Nile Army has been moved across the Mediterranean to fight in Greece and Yugoslavia.

injured by the British raids, a communique stated, adding that strong anti-aircraft fire prevented the RAF machines from hitting important objectives. Four British planes were said to have been shot down.

Fires started by German raiders last night, it was announced, were visible more than 30 miles. The high command said an important English south coast harbor and important industrial plants in the midlands were attacked.

Several hundred planes participated in these raids, which lasted from dusk to dawn and which covered an area including important southeast and southwest coastal ports and even industrial centers in northern Scotland.

SEN. SHEPPARD OF TEXAS DIES IN WASHINGTON

Father Of Prohibition Act Victim Of Hemorrhage Of Brain

LONG SERVICE TRACED

Important Role Filled in Passage Of Compulsory Training Bill

WASHINGTON, April 9.—Sen. Morris Sheppard (D) Tex., 66-year-old chairman of the Senate Military Affairs committee and dean of the senate, died at 5:30 a. m. Wednesday at Walter Reed Hospital from a slow hemorrhage into the brain. Announcement of the senator's death was made by Congressional Physician Dr. George W. Calver.

The senator was stricken with an intracranial hemorrhage Friday morning and remained at home until Sunday night when he was removed to the hospital. News of his condition was not made public until last night at the request of his family.

Sheppard was noted as the sponsor of the Prohibition Act, and as an outstanding American patriot.

In recent months Sheppard brushed aside the repeated advice of physicians to rest. He insisted on being on hand to champion and steer through the senate some of the most important legislation of the times, including the first peace-time military conscription act in history.

In Congress 39 Years

Sheppard, referred to by colleagues as dean of congress because of his 39 years of consecutive service in the house and senate, first gained national prominence when he began his fight for prohibition in 1913. When the 18th amendment to the Constitution became effective in 1920 he was hailed as "father of prohibition."

One of the most popular men ever to serve in congress, he was elected to the 59th congress to fill out the unexpired term of his father. His service started in the house on October 11, 1902. He entered the senate in 1913 after establishing a brilliant record in the lower chamber.

Sheppard was born at Wheatville, Morris County, Texas, May 28, 1875. He attended public schools and later was graduated from the law school of the University of Texas. He took an additional course at Yale Law School.

He began the practice of law at Pittsburg, Texas, in 1898, and located at Texarkana a year later. In 1909, he married Miss Lucile Sanderson of Texarkana.

tics with AFL and CIO moguls than in averting labor blowups.

The one-time Alabama sociology professor has been criticized on this score in the inner circle for some time. It is charged that Steelman has loaded his staff with AFL and CIO men and built up such a powerful lobbying machine that he, not Miss Perkins, actually is running the Labor Department.

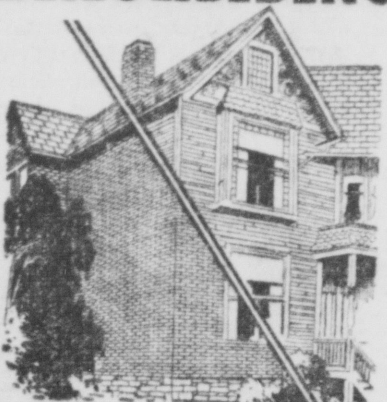

His influence is graphically shown in the Allis-Chalmers and coal cases. Defense and Administration chiefs strongly urged prompt action in both, but Steelman was able to overrule them—until, in the Allis-Chalmers case, they went over Miss Perkins' head and she was ordered to call in the Mediation Board.

DARK ITALIAN EMBASSY

Washington society in recent weeks seldom has been more hectic and more gay. But seldom have the doors of the once gay Italian Embassy been darker. There are several reasons for this, one of them being that members of the Embassy are not invited out any more; another that Italian diplomats do not feel very much like going out anyway.

Prince Colonna, the very charming Ambassador, happens to be married to a Greek wife, so his idea on war with Greece can be left to the imagination. Other Embassy members have close friends in Great Britain, Greece and the United States. There is no enthusiasm about the war.

Now banished from the United States is Admiral Alberto Lais, naval attache, involved in sabotaging the Italian ships seized in American harbors last week. For him departure from this country is especially heart-rending because he not only leaves behind an American wife and daughter, but what most people do not know, he has a son in the Italian Navy. Thus father and son will be in Italy, with mother and daughter in the United States.

Admiral and Signora Lais were among the few which still entertained at dinner. Recently, among their guests were Assistant Secretary of State and Mrs. Breckinridge Long, with Sam Reber of the State Department. Long once was Ambassador to Rome, while Reber was stationed in the Embassy there.

After dinner the jovial Admiral Lais took the gentlemen into his library, where he talked about his country and about his hopes that the war soon would be over. "You see," he said with slightly pathetic smile, "I am half American."

Then the Admiral gazed intently at a portrait on the table, a familiar portrait of a man in a helmet, with flashing eyes, pugnacious jaw, looking as if he was ready to lick the world. It was Benito Mussolini.

Perhaps symbolic, across the glass covering the portrait ran a long deep crack.

Note—Last week Admiral Lais allegedly ordered the sabotage of 28 Italian vessels and was asked by the State Department to leave the country. The Admiral had followed his leader.

Youths in Canal Zone, Fort Bragg Write of Air Corps, Army Service

Interesting letters were received this week from Circleville youths who are in the service of Uncle Sam, one of them from David Steinhauser, who is with the Air Corps at Albright Field in the Canal Zone, and the other from Abner Griffey, assigned last week to Fort Bragg, N. C. after volunteering for his year's training.

The letters follow:

Steinhauser's: "I've been reading articles in the paper about the fellows at Shelby and perhaps I can use one of these as a basis for this letter. The entire government area is overcrowded and many tents are being used. More men are coming, according to the post grapevine telegraph. And as for double-decked bunks, they have been that way here for a year. Luckily, I have a single bunk, and our squadron mess is the best on the field. We eat like kings. I ate four slices of watermelon last Sunday.

"I'd say about 99 percent of the men here are enjoying perfect health, and this climate is exceptionally fine. As for promotion, that depends on one's ability, personality, luck and initiative.

"There are numerous men here from Ohio. Bill Bosworth from home left for the states March 4. He served his time here well and deserves much praise.

"I can't quite agree with the viewpoint about military police service being distasteful. Some soldiers consider it bad, but when I worked on it at Maxwell Field it was a good life.

"I've seen all branches of service in maneuvers down here. The terrain is much rougher than anywhere in the states. Those recruits don't know what soldiering is until they've been in foreign service.

"There's little talk here of war, either. We just read the newspapers and hope we'll see the U. S. again before we get in any conflict. There is little danger of ever getting any action down here.

"Panama has a good golf club, and we have some top flight baseball players here, including a man who pitched at West Point and a pitcher who claims to be the brother of Johnny Allen of the big leagues. Our first baseman played in the Southern League and our shortstop in the Mid-Atlantic League.

"As for politics we are hardly interested. Our work requires all our time and thought, and we're all for our country regardless of which party is in power. There are good jobs open here in the Construction Quartermaster. Rooms are hard to find. Model barracks towns are springing up down here, too. The weather ranges from 110 degrees in mid-day to 55 degrees at midnight. We have some splendid fishing grounds, barricauda and all. There are rare flower species, but there's little time to tramp the countryside for them."

Griffey's: "Just a line to say I have arrived at my destination, Fort Bragg, North Carolina. I am in the land of southern fried chicken and hospitality, but I haven't had any of either yet.

"The weather is fine, a little warm but pleasant. The country down here is red clay and sandy soil and pine trees galore. The camp is an immense thing, and believe it or not the peach trees are in bloom.

"We came by way of Circleville, Chillicothe, Portsmouth, ties with AFL and CIO moguls than in averting labor blowups.

The one-time Alabama sociology professor has been criticized on this score in the inner circle for some time. It is charged that Steelman has loaded his staff with AFL and CIO men and built up such a powerful lobbying machine that he, not Miss Perkins, actually is running the Labor Department.

His influence is graphically shown in the Allis-Chalmers and coal cases. Defense and Administration chiefs strongly urged prompt action in both, but Steelman was able to overrule them—until, in the Allis-Chalmers case, they went over Miss Perkins' head and she was ordered to call in the Mediation Board.

BACHELOR MARTIN

In being persuaded to remain as Republican National Chairman, Joe Martin was willing to let the party leaders regulate his public life—but not his private life.

At the meeting which decided his continuance in office, the party chiefs also discussed a proposal to set up committees to study special political and economic problems. Mrs. Lindsay Patterson, National Committeewoman from North Carolina, asked to be named chairman of a "matrimonial

DARK ITALIAN EMBASSY

Washington society in recent weeks seldom has been more hectic and more gay. But seldom have the doors of the once gay Italian Embassy been darker. There are several reasons for this, one of them being that members of the Embassy are not invited to any more; another that Italian diplomats do not feel very much like going out anyway.

Prince Colonna, the very charming Ambassador, happens to be married to a Greek wife, so his idea on war with Greece can be left to the imagination. Other Embassy members have close friends in Great Britain, Greece and the United States. There is no enthusiasm about the war.

Now banished from the United States is Admiral Alberto Lais, naval attache, involved in sabotaging the Italian ships seized in American harbors last week. For him departure from this country is especially heart-rending because he not only leaves behind an American wife and daughter, but what most people do not know, he has a son in the Italian Navy. Thus father and son will be in Italy, with mother and daughter in the United States.

Admiral and Signora Lais were among the few which still entertained at dinner. Recently, among their guests were Assistant Secretary of State and Mrs. Breckinridge Long, with Sam Reber of the State Department. Long once was Ambassador to Rome, while Reber was stationed in the Embassy there.

After dinner the jovial Admiral Lais took the gentlemen into his library, where he talked about his country and about his hopes that the war soon would be over. "You see," he said with slightly pathetic smile, "I am half American."

Then the Admiral gazed intently at a portrait on the table, a familiar portrait of a man in a helmet, with flashing eyes, pugnacious jaw, looking as if he was ready to lick the world. It was Benito Mussolini.

Perhaps symbolic, across the glass covering the portrait ran a long deep crack.

Note—Last week Admiral Lais allegedly ordered the sabotage of 28 Italian vessels and was asked by the State Department to leave the country. The Admiral had followed his leader.

Youths in Canal Zone, Fort Bragg Write of Air Corps, Army Service

Interesting letters were received this week from Circleville youths who are in the service of Uncle Sam, one of them from David Steinhauer, who is with the Air Corps at Albrook Field in the Canal Zone, and the other from Abner Griffey, assigned last week to Fort Bragg, N. C. after volunteering for his year's training.

The letters follow: "I've been reading articles in the paper about the fellows at Shelby and perhaps I can use one of these as a basis for this letter. The entire government area is overcrowded and many tents are being used. More men are coming, according to the post grapevine telegraph. And as for double-decked bunks, they have been there for a year. Luckily, I have a single bunk, and our squad room mess is the best on the field. We eat like kings. I ate four slices of watermelon last Sunday.

"I'd say about 99 percent of the men here are enjoying perfect health, and this climate is exceptionally fine. As for promotion, that depends on one's ability, personality, luck and initiative. "There are numerous men here from Ohio. Bill Bosworth from home left for the states March 4. He served his time here well and deserves much praise. "I can't quite agree with the viewpoint about military police service being distasteful. Some soldiers consider it bad, but when I worked on it at Maxwell Field it was a good life.

"I've seen all branches of service in maneuvers down here. The terrain is much rougher than anywhere in the states. Those recruits don't know what soldiering is until they've been in foreign service. "There's little talk here of war, either. We just read the newspapers and hope we'll see the U. S. again before we get in any conflict. There is little danger of ever getting any action down here. "Panama has a good golf club, and we have some top flight baseball players here, including a man who pitched at West Point and a pitcher who claims to be the brother of Johnny Allen of the big leagues. Our first baseman played in the Southern League and our shortstop in the Mid-Atlantic League.

"As for politics we are hardly interested. Our work requires all our time and thought, and we're all for our country regardless of which party is in power. There are good jobs open here in the Construction Quartermaster. Rooms are hard to find. Model barracks towns are springing up down here, too. The weather ranges from 110 degrees in midday to 55 degrees at midnight. We have some splendid fishing grounds, barricauda and all. There are rare flower species, but there's little time to tramp the countryside for them."

Griffey's: "Just a line to say I have arrived at my destination, Fort Bragg, North Carolina. I am in the land of southern fried chicken and hospitality, but I haven't had any of either yet.

"The weather is fine, a little warm but pleasant. The country down here is red clay and sandy soil and pine trees galore. The camp is an immense thing, and believe it or not the peach trees are in bloom. "We came by way of Circleville, Chillicothe, Portsmouth,

RIGHTS AND LAW

It was natural that the Berlin and Rome governments should squawk about our government's crack-down on their ships lying in our ports. But they have been unduly hysterical about it.

When they call it "an absolute violation of human rights and a complete disregard for international law" they are turning truth upside down. Our state department patiently explains that these proceedings have been entirely legal, under both international law and American law. We followed the same procedure in the last war, and other nations have followed it and are now following it.

The Axis protest is especially uncalled-for because the Axis powers took the initiative in disabling their vessels in American ports, thus impeding navigation and threatening the safety of our own shipping.

But aside from these plain facts, it is rather humorous to find governments that have made it their regular business to violate human rights and disregard international law, now claiming such protection.

THE ONION MENACE

GLAMOUR girls, according to Inez Robb, who is a sort of specialist in such deep matters, are now "preferring onions to orchids." Wouldn't that knock you over?

The preference hasn't yet swept this country, but the threat is evident. It comes from an invasion of English girls who are in the fashion business, bent on displaying English clothes in this hemisphere. They stopped at New York the other day long enough to start some of their nefarious propaganda.

"Orchids!" they are reported to have cried scornfully when such gifts were offered them. "We don't want orchids! We want onions. We haven't had any at home for months."

Well, there's no accounting for tastes, and we have plenty of onions. This whole hemisphere has plenty of onions. They will doubtless be satisfied in Latin-America, where they are going.

But the incident worries Americans a little. Suppose women in general began demanding onions instead of orchids. They might even go so far as to wear bouquets of green onions, or chives, for corsages. It would be very healthful, no doubt. And all members of the onion family are said to be chuck-full of vita-

Daily Washington Merry-Go-Round

PRESSURE ON PERKINS

WASHINGTON—Inner circles clamor for replacement of Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins is an old story, but it's hotter now than ever before.

Actually, Roosevelt did move last year to get a new Labor Secretary, offering the post to Mayor LaGuardia. But he declined, insisting on the War Department or nothing.

Now, with labor a key problem, White House advisers are urging that the President renew the offer to LaGuardia and, appealing to his patriotism, refuse to take NO for an answer. With his liberal record, long public experience, and dynamic ability, it is argued that LaGuardia is a natural for the Labor portfolio.

Another high-calibered New Dealer proposed as alternative choice is Solicitor General Francis Biddle. Besides being one of the ablest executives in the Administration, the ex-Philadelphia judge also has had extensive labor experience as chairman of the old National Labor Board.

FANNY PANNED

There was some plain talking on the labor situation at last Friday's Cabinet meeting, and it was aimed squarely at Miss Perkins.

She was criticized sharply for the delay in certifying the protracted Allis-Chalmers strike to the National Defense Mediation Board until rioting broke out, also the coal negotiations before they deadlocked and John L. Lewis shut down the mines. Both the President and other Cabinet members bluntly called Miss Perkins' attention to the fact that the purpose of the Board was not only to settle strikes but to avert them.

With some feeling it was demanded of her why the Board, set up expressly to handle "hot potatoes", was not used in these two major cases. The view was expressed that much of the criticism now being showered on the President was caused by failure to make effective use of the Mediation Board. Roosevelt was getting the blame for Miss Perkins' bungling.

The 324 to 1 vote by the House of Representatives for a sweeping probe of defense labor problems was also thrown in Miss Perkins' face.

Miss Perkins, noted for her loquacity at Cabinet sessions, made a long defense of herself. She claimed that John R. Steelman, chief of the Conciliation Service, had told her he thought he could settle the Allis-Chalmers strike, and that Lewis had told Steelman he would not stand for turning the coal negotiations over to the Mediation Board.

ANTI-STEELMAN

Steelman also came in for some sharp discussion at the Cabinet meeting. One shot was to the effect that he seemed to be more interested in playing personal politics than in settling the labor situation.

DIET AND HEALTH

Summing Up Personality

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

What is the generally accepted belief concerning the location of human personality? Do the endocrine glands still get all the blame? What is ambition, a sense of responsibility, patience, egotism?

Psychologists no longer are inclined to locate these functions or personality properties. The seat of the soul was kicked around in the brain for a while and then from one ductless gland to the other. Now the term is "psychobiology"—the whole mass makes the personality. Your hand and its functions have just as much to do with personality as part of your brain. As you train your hand to do skilful things, the process conditions certain cells in your brain. This is reflected in your pride and the sparkle of your eyes. They all add up to make personality.

Dr. Clendening will answer questions of general interest only, and then only through his column.

Tuberculosis and Marriage

When is a case of tuberculosis cured enough to get married safely?

The use of the word "cured" as heard in connection with tuberculosis is not now allowed by strict standards. "Apparently cured" is used. This would mean there were no general constitutional symptoms such as fatigue, loss of weight or night sweats present. There should be no fever any time in the twenty-four hours. If any expectation occurs, the sputum must be found to contain no tuberculosis germs by concentration under the microscope or by animal inoculation. When no expectation is present, the stomach should be washed out and the contents examined for tubercle germs, because the patient often unconsciously swallows them. The X-ray should show that the condition is stationary. When these conditions have prevailed for two years, marriage may be allowed. The terms seem harsh, but it should be remembered that tuberculosis is essentially a relapsing disease.

What is the cause of a sensation of warmth and mild pain in the armpits of a middle-aged woman?

These conditions are very common. Technically they are known as "dermatitis." It is assumed that there is no change in the appearance of the skin.

This is ascribed to a disturbance of the nerves supplying the skin of the part affected; supposedly the nerves of the vegetative nervous system. The pain varies in different cases, sometimes being burning, sometimes the sensation of cold water running over the skin, or the sensation of an electric current. The attacks come on usually at night and usually the patients are women.

The causes are possibly rheumatism, anemia, or vitamin deficiency. Exposure to cold is also to be considered. Treatment consists in the use of any substances which will quiet the nervous system and relieve the local pain and irritation—such as aspirin, salicin, quinine and arsenic. The X-ray has often been used successfully in relieving these conditions.

Very important it is to see that the clothing or bed clothing is not of an irritating character as in some instances the condition seems to be a form of allergy due to sensitivity to wool or other materials.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

S. B.:—"Could a pain in the chest that remains for several hours be caused by overwork? Could such a pain cause me to be weak and run down?"

Answer—Work doesn't cause localized pain, only a general feeling of fatigue. The occurrence of a pain such as you describe suggests heart trouble and means all work should be given up. It also suggests a visit to a doctor.

Honeymoon Gold

by PEGGY DERN

RELEASED BY CENTRAL PRESS ASSOCIATION

SYNOPSIS

JORDAN MARKHAM, wealthy invalid owner of Halcyon Island, decides to make it a honeymoon haven for newlyweds, but his new business associates want to use the island as a way station for smuggling aliens into the United States and are infuriated when he carries out his plans. To act as host and hostess, Markham meets TOM PORMAN and BETSY CARTER, who has married Tom, although he is a stranger, because it is necessary that Tom be a married man to hold the job.

Markham is found dead, and in his will it is discovered that his estate has been left to Tom and Betsy on the condition that the island be maintained as a "honeymoon" island until danger of war has passed for the United States.

CHAPTER NINE

IT WAS a beautiful wedding, of course. Why wouldn't it be? She was Natalie Schuyler, who had inherited an incredible number of millions from a long line of sturdy, money-making ancestors. She had been the Number One Glamour Girl of her debutante year, and since then, three years ago, nobody had been quite able to dislodge her from that place. Whenever she appeared in public, cameramen seemed to pop out of the ground; her name was a byword all over the country.

And Brooks Marchbanks? Of English ancestry, a well-located and very solid title not too far out of his reach, for all that he had been born and brought up in America and was as American as baseball. He was tall, lean, dark, handsome in an almost breathtaking way; with a gay, white flash of a smile and a cocky eyebrow that mounted a little higher than its mate when he was pleased or amused—which was often, for Brooks was of a happy disposition.

He danced like a dream; swam, played polo, golf, he was just about perfect. Brooks was, Natalie decided shakily as she stood beside him, a slim, exquisite girl with honey-colored hair, her arms laden with lilies and deep blue iris, great-grandmother's all but priceless lace veil clinging to her sunny curls.

It was the season's most elaborate and socially important wedding. There was a terrific crush of people all over the place, yet somehow Natalie managed to slip out of her wedding gown and into her traveling costume and get out to the car hidden down the street, where Brooks awaited her. The limousine, decorated with ribbons and white roses, waited at the front; she and Brooks had climbed into his specially built roadster, and were halfway to the George Washington bridge before their guests discovered their absence.

Natalie set her teeth hard for a moment. She mustn't let him know how excited she was. He expected her to be poised, cool, self-possessed. And so after a moment she shrugged a lovely shoulder and drawled, "Oh, it's nice to have it over with—what a brawl!"

Brooks' jaw set a little and his hands tightened on the wheel. But he only answered quietly, "I thought it was rather well done. You, at least, were gorgeous, my treasure."

"A trick done with mirrors," she told him lightly. "And a rather superlative frock—and an atmosphere made all syrupy with 'The Voice That Breathed O'er Eden'—and the scent of flowers, and all that. A sort of barbaric rite, don't you think? All it needed was the dancing maidens and the roasted oxen and other sacrifices to the gods."

"Oh, well, it was quite a show. It'll be some time before another dame manages to overshadow it, darling," Brooks assured her.

Her heart was very low. A show! It hadn't meant anything to him beyond that. It had been almost a business arrangement, a partnership. He would lend her his name, his social position that was a little better than hers, even though there hadn't been any money to go with that position. On her side, she would supply the enormous funds necessary to maintain their social position. She stole a glance at him, and once again her heart did that crazy, fantastic nose-dive that it always did when she looked at him. She trembled a little and would have given everything she owned to have him bring her the car to a sudden halt, take her in his arms, and kiss her breathless.

And yet when they stopped for the night at the impressive hotel they had selected, and were alone in their beautiful suite, she couldn't bring herself to meet even the slightest of his overtures toward lovemaking. When he stood just back of her, his fingers caressing her neck, she all but jerked away from him. When he bent as though to kiss her, she drew away; she would kiss him more than she had ever wanted anything in all her life, but not the sort of kiss he was offering her now—the dutiful, expected kiss. She wanted him to kiss her as she wanted him—not to kiss her simply because it was the expected thing. And when she evaded him and he gave a tiny shrug and walked away, her heart lay in the very heels of her smart, silly slippers.

They had dinner served in their suite. Neither of them ate. Each pretended to the other a terrific appetite, but simply picked at the food. Later, when it had been cleared away, and Natalie could no longer endure the tension that was growing between them, she rose suddenly, avoiding his eyes. "I'll see you in the morning—good night."

If he had looked hurt, surprised, resentful; if he had touched her, made one single protest—but he didn't. He simply stood up, gave her a polite bow, as though she had been the most casual acquaintance, and repeated her good night.

She told herself as she walked almost blindly to her own room and closed the door behind her, absent-mindedly shooting the bolt as she did so, that he had even looked a little relieved. And the thought of that bit like an acid.

Long after she had crept into bed she lay looking into the darkness, desiring herself because her heart cried out to him—and her pride reminded her of the stories she had heard about Brooks and the Broadway actress he had wanted to marry, but who had refused because he was poor.

Of course, Natalie reminded herself grimly, she had only herself to blame for the present situation. She had known all along that Brooks didn't love her; that it had been her money that had brought him to her side. He hadn't made love to her except when she had all but forced it. She flushed guiltily to remember that she had practically proposed to him, scarlet with shame as she remembered the night when they had been out so very late at somebody's party and it had been almost dawn when they came home. She had laughed up at him in the fresh dawn light and said teasingly, "And now that you have to make an honest woman of me, darling, I'm afraid you're trapped. I'm a designing female—or had you already guessed that?"

"You're a lovely one, anyway," Brooks had said, and kissed her. A gay, amused, teasing kiss. Only all of a sudden she had melted into his arms and the kiss had stopped being gay and teasing and had become demanding, urgent—

"You'd better marry me, Brooks," she had whispered, her voice shaken. "I'll probably sue you if you don't!"

Brooks had kissed her again and put her away from him, and had said almost sternly, "You don't want to marry me, Natalie."

But she had refused to be put away. She had clung to him, lifting her face for his kisses. And she had said, her voice tender, "Who says I don't?"

Brooks' arms had tightened about her. "Natalie—DO you? Will you? No foolin'?"

"I do! I will! No foolin'!" she had told him breathlessly. And that had been that.

The engagement had been announced. The wedding date set. Parties started; people began to call up and ask all sorts of questions—and her friends began to gossip, of course. Brooks was all but penniless—two thousand a year, or some such beggarly sum; and she was so terribly rich. She hated herself suddenly because she was lying here in her lonely bridal bed with her face muffled against the pillows, crying as though her sore heart would break.

But she had herself well in hand the next morning when they resumed their journey. There were no traces of her tears, no trace of her heartbreak. She was cool and polished and smooth as a doll. Brooks greeted her with some light, amusing remark that set the tempo for their day.

WORLD AT A GLANCE

—By—
Charles P. Stewart

Excepting a smallish group of enthusiasts who evolved the idea of a federation including the United States and the whole British empire, bodily, I don't find many commentators who believe such a merger would be practicable.

I do hear it suggested from some responsible sources, however, that in case the empire's defeated and blows up, its Pacific oceanic components probably will tend strongly to gravitate in this country's direction. It's a view taken, for example, by the Foreign Policy Association, a privately-funded American organization which specializes on world conditions and does it very intelligently.

Advocates of an out-and-out merger want the English-speaking peoples to federate even if the war ends in a draw or if the British definitely win it.

This would mean that the aggregation would have to come some sort of a collective king or president and a joint congress or parliament. We'd be, nationally, on the same basis as any one of our states and our states virtually would be American colonies. Washington would be transformed from a federal into a state capital. The present British empire would be another, state, with England, Scotland, Wales, Canada, Australia, New Zealand, India, et cetera, as its counties. Gosh knows where central headquarters would be; the scheme's proponents haven't explained that yet.

Those who pooh-pooh the notion are of the opinion that we'd never stand for being so amalgamated.

They don't believe that the British would, either. They'd insist on having the main king of the entire set-up, just as we'd insist on having the main president.

IF BRITISH LOSE

But suppose the British, despite all the aid we can give 'em are licked, so far as their home island's concerned.

Probably their first thought would be to transfer their imperial seat of government from London to Canada—Ottawa, most likely. They'd be pretty badly disorganized by that time, however. Canada itself would be safe enough, for quite a while at least. An Ottawa regime, though, surely wouldn't be in a position to take much care of as far-away places as Australia and New Zealand.

Canada, for that matter, isn't inclined to turn itself over to a refugee English rulership. It wants to stay British while the empire lasts, but if the empire pops it wants to be independent. It doesn't want to be assimilated into the United States, either, regardless of what happens. It wants to be closely associated with us, but not to become Yankee-ized. Washington's level full of Canadian newsmen just now, here to get all the latest dope on our aid-to-Britain activities. They naturally are extremely well posted as to Canuck sentiment and I've talked with plenty of 'em. They all tell the same story.

The Dominion is solidly for keeping the home island a-going. It certainly would be hospitable to Prime Minister Churchill and his bunch if they were chased across the Atlantic, but they'd balk at being changed into England. They'd be glad to do all they could, too, for their Pacific oceanic brethren, but they couldn't do much.

Thus Australia, New Zealand, Singapore and British possessions thereabouts would be out on the end of a long limb.

It wouldn't be Germany, but Japan, that would worry 'em.

ANZACS WOULD NEED HELP
Of course the Anzacs are good scrappers, but they'd need help if the Japs jumped on 'em and it's notorious that they've had an eye, for a long time, on Australasia and Malaya and India.

So the Foreign Policy association assumes the possibility that the defeat of crippling of Great Britain would force "Australia and other British empire countries (in the Pacific and eastern south seas) to rely on assistance from the United States."

Which, continues the association's argument, "would involve far-reaching implications—an extension of the Monroe Doctrine far beyond its present confines and a reorientation of Australia's external relations."

Extension of the Monroe Doctrine just how far, what?

That's the question that the Foreign Policy association hints at.

However, extension of the Monroe Doctrine doesn't necessarily imply a federation. The doctrine applies to the Pan-American now, but it isn't a federation.

RIGHTS AND LAW

It was natural that the Berlin and Rome governments should squawk about our government's crack-down on their ships lying in our ports. But they have been unduly hysterical about it.

When they call it "an absolute violation of human rights and a complete disregard for international law" they are turning truth upside down. Our state department patiently explains that these proceedings have been entirely legal, under both international law and American law. We followed the same procedure in the last war, and other nations have followed it and are now following it.

The Axis protest is especially uncalled-for because the Axis powers took the initiative in disabling their vessels in American ports, thus impeding navigation and threatening the safety of our own shipping.

But aside from these plain facts, it is rather humorous to find governments that have made it their regular business to violate human rights and disregard international law, now claiming such protection.

THE ONION MENACE

GLAMOUR girls, according to Inez Robb, who is a sort of specialist in such deep matters, are now "preferring onions to orchids." Wouldn't that knock you over?

The preference hasn't yet swept this country, but the threat is evident. It comes from an invasion of English girls who are in the fashion business, bent on displaying English clothes in this hemisphere. They stopped at New York the other day long enough to start some of their nefarious propaganda.

"Orchids," they are reported to have cried scornfully when such gifts were offered them. "We don't want orchids! We want onions. We haven't had any at home for months."

Well, there's no accounting for tastes, and we have plenty of onions. This whole hemisphere has plenty of onions. They will doubtless be satisfied in Latin-America, where they are going.

But the incident worries Americans a little. Suppose women in general began demanding onions instead of orchids. They might even go so far as to wear bouquets of green onions, or chives, for corsages. It would be very healthful, no doubt. And all members of the onion family are said to be chuck-full of vitamins.

WORLD AT A GLANCE

—By—
Charles P. Stewart

Excepting a smallish group of enthusiasts who evolved the idea of a federation including the United States and the whole British empire, bodily, I don't find many commentators who believe such a merger would be practicable.

I do hear it suggested from some responsible sources, however, that in case the empire's defeated and blows up, its Pacific oceanic components probably will tend strongly to gravitate in this country's direction. It's a view taken, for example, by the Foreign Policy Association, a privately-funded American organization which specializes on world conditions and does it very intelligently.

Advocates of an out-and-out merger want the English-speaking peoples to federate even if the war ends in a draw or if the British definitely win it.

This would mean that the aggregation would have to come some sort of a collective king or president and a joint congress or parliament. We'd be, nationally, on the same basis as any one of our states and our states virtually would be American counties.

Daily Washington Merry-Go-Round

BY DREW PEARSON AND ROBERT S. ALLEN

PRESSURE ON PERKINS

WASHINGTON—Inner circles clamor for replacement of Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins is an old story, but it's hotter now than ever before.

Actually, Roosevelt did move last year to get a new Labor Secretary, offering the post to Mayor LaGuardia. But he declined, insisting on the War Department or nothing.

Now, with labor a key problem, White House advisers are urging that the President renew the offer to LaGuardia and, appealing to his patriotism, refuse to take NO for an answer. With his liberal record, long public experience, and dynamic ability, it is argued that LaGuardia is a natural for the Labor portfolio.

Another high-calibered New Dealer proposed as alternative choice is Solicitor General Francis Biddle. Besides being one of the ablest executives in the Administration, the ex-Philadelphia judge also has had extensive labor experience as chairman of the old National Labor Board.

FANNY PANNED

There was some plain talking on the labor situation at last Friday's Cabinet meeting, and it was aimed squarely at Miss Perkins.

She was criticized sharply for the delay in certifying the protracted Allis-Chalmers strike to the National Defense Mediation Board until rioting broke out, also the coal negotiations before they deadlocked and John L. Lewis shut down the mines. Both the President and other Cabinet members bluntly called Miss Perkins' attention to the fact that the purpose of the Board was not only to settle strikes but to avert them.

With some feeling it was demanded of her why the Board, set up expressly to handle "hot potatoes", was not used in these two major cases. The view was expressed that much of the criticism now being showered on the President was caused by failure to make effective use of the Mediation Board. Roosevelt was getting the blame for Miss Perkins' bungling.

The 324 to 1 vote by the House of Representatives for a sweeping probe of defense labor problems was also thrown in Miss Perkins' face.

Miss Perkins, noted for her loquacity at Cabinet sessions, made a long defense of herself. She claimed that John R. Steelman, chief of the Conciliation Service, had told her he thought he could settle the Allis-Chalmers strike, and that Lewis had told Steelman he would not stand for turning the coal negotiations over to the Mediation Board.

ANTI-STEELMAN

Steelman also came in for some sharp discussion at the Cabinet meeting. One shot was to the effect that he seemed to be more interested in playing personal politics.

DIET AND HEALTH

Summing Up Personality

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

What is the generally accepted belief concerning the location of human personality? Do the endocrine glands still get all the blame? What is ambition, a sense of responsibility, patience, egotism?

Psychologists no longer are inclined to locate these functions or personality properties. The seat of the soul was kicked around in the brain for a while and then from one ductless gland to the other. Now the term is "psychobiology"—the whole mass makes the personality. Your hand and its functions have just as much to do with personality as part of your brain. As you train your hand to do skilful things, the process conditions certain cells in your brain. This is reflected in your pride and the sparkle of your eyes. They all add up to make personality.

Dr. Clendening will answer questions of general interest only, and then only through his column.

Tuberculosis and Marriage

When is a case of tuberculosis cured enough to get married safely?

The use of the word "cured" as heard in connection with tuberculosis is not now allowed by strict standards. "Apparently cured" is used. This would mean there were no general constitutional symptoms such as fatigue, loss of weight or night sweats present. There should be no fever any time in the twenty-four hours. If any expectoration occurs, the sputum must be found to contain no tuberculous germs by concentration under the microscope or by animal inoculation. When no expectoration is present, the stomach should be washed out and the contents examined for tubercle germs, because the patient often unconsciously swallows them. The X-ray should show that the condition is stationary. When these conditions have prevailed for two years, marriage may be allowed. The terms seem harsh, but it should be remembered that tuberculosis is essentially a relapsing disease.

What is the cause of a sensation

of warmth and mild pain in the armpits of a middle-aged woman?

These conditions are very common. Technically they are known as "dermatalgia." It is assumed that there is no change in the appearance of the skin.

This is ascribed to a disturbance of the nerves supplying the skin of the part affected; supposedly the nerves of the vegetative nervous system. The pain varies in different cases, sometimes being burning, sometimes the sensation of cold water running over the skin, or the sensation of an electric current. The attacks come on usually at night and usually the patients are woken.

The causes are possibly rheumatism, anemia, or vitamin deficiency. Exposure to cold is also to be considered. Treatment consists in the use of any substances which will relieve the local pain and irritation—such as aspirin, salicin, quinine and arsenic. The X-ray has often been used successfully in relieving these conditions.

Very important it is to see that the clothing or bed clothing is not of an irritating character as in some instances the condition seems to be a form of allergy due to sensitivity to wool or other materials.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS
S. B.:—"Could a pain in the chest that remains for several hours be caused by overwork? Could such a pain cause me to be weak and run down?"

Answer—Work doesn't cause localized pain, only a general feeling of fatigue. The occurrence of a pain such as you describe suggests heart trouble and means all work should be given up. It also suggests a visit to a doctor.

Honeymoon Gold

by PEGGY DERN
RELEASED BY CENTRAL PRESS ASSOCIATION

JORDAN MARKHAM, wealthy invalid owner of Markham Island, decides to make it a honeymoon haven for newlyweds, but his new business associates want to use the island as a way station for smuggling aliens into the United States and are infuriated when he carries out his plans. To act as host and hostess, Markham selects TOM FORMAN and BETSY CARTER, who has married Tom, although he is a stranger, because it is necessary that Tom be a married man to hold the job.

Markham is found dead, and in his will it is discovered that his estate has been left to Tom and Betsy on the condition that the island be maintained as a "honeymoon" island until danger of war has passed for the United States.

CHAPTER NINE

IT WAS a beautiful wedding, of course. Why wouldn't it be? She was Natalie Schuyler, who had inherited an incredible number of millions from a long line of sturdy, money-making ancestors. She had been the Number One Glamour Girl of her debutante year, and since then, three years ago, nobody had been quite able to dislodge her from that place. Whenever she appeared in public, cameramen seemed to pop out of the ground; her name was a byword all over the country.

And Brooks Marchbanks? Of English ancestry, a well-located and very solid title not too far out of his reach, for all that he had been born and brought up in America and was as American as baseball.

He was tall, lean, dark, handsome in an almost breathtaking way, with a gay, white flash of a smile and a cocky eyebrow that mounted a little higher than its mate when he was pleased or amused—which was often, for Brooks was of a happy disposition. He danced like a dream; swam, played polo, golf. Oh, he was just about perfect. Brooks was, Natalie decided shakily as she stood beside him, a slim, exquisite girl with honey-colored hair, her arms laden with lilies and deep blue iris, great-grandmother's all but priceless lace veil clinging to her sunny curls.

It was the season's most elaborate and socially important wedding. There was a terrific crush of people all over the place, yet somehow Natalie managed to slip out of her wedding gown and into her traveling costume and get out to the car hidden down the street, where Brooks awaited her. The impossibly decorated with ribbons and white roses, waited at the front; she and Brooks had climbed into his specially built roadster, and were halfway to the George Washington bridge before their guests discovered their absence.

Natalie set her teeth hard for a moment. She mustn't let him know how excited she was. He expected her to be poised, cool, self-possessed. And so after a moment she shrugged a lovely shoulder and drawled, "Oh, it's nice to have it over with—what a brawl!"

Brooks' jaw set a little and his hands tightened on the wheel. But she did so, that he had even looked he only answered quietly, "I thought it was rather well done. You, at least, were gorgeous, my treasure."

"A trick done with mirrors," she told him lightly. "And a rather superlative frock—and an atmosphere made all syrupy with 'The Voice That Breathed O'er Eden'—and the scent of flowers, and all that. A sort of barbaric rite, don't you think? All it needed was the dancing maidens and the roasted oxen and other sacrifices to the gods."

"Oh, well, it was quite a show. It'll be some time before another dame manages to overshadow it, darling," Brooks assured her.

Her heart was very low. A show! It hadn't meant anything to him beyond that. It had been almost a business arrangement, a partnership. He would lend her his name, his social position that was a little better than hers, even though there hadn't been any money to go with that position. On her side, she would supply the enormous funds necessary to maintain their social position. She stole a glance at him, and once again her heart did that crazy, fantastic nose-dive that always did when she looked at him. She trembled a little and would have given everything she owned to have had him bring the car to a sudden halt, take her in his arms, and kiss her breathless.

And yet when they stopped for the night at the impressive hotel they had selected, and were alone in their beautiful suite, she couldn't bring herself to meet even the slightest of his overtures toward lovemaking. When he stood just back of her, his fingers caressing her neck, she all but jerked away from him. When he bent as though to kiss her, she drew away. She wanted his kiss more than she had ever wanted anything in all her life, but not the sort of kiss he was offering her now—the dutiful, expected kiss. She wanted him to want her kiss as she wanted his—not to kiss her simply because it was the expected thing. And when she evaded him and he gave a tiny shrug and walked away, her heart lay in the very heels of her smart, silly slippers.

They had dinner served in their suite. Neither of them ate. Each pretended to the other a terrific appetite, but simply picked at the food. Later, when it had been cleared away, and Natalie could no longer endure the tension that was growing between them, she rose suddenly, avoiding his eyes. "I'll see you in the morning—good night."

If he had looked hurt, surprised, resentful; if he had touched her, made one single protest—but he didn't. He simply stood up, gave her a polite bow, as though she had been the most casual acquaintance, and repeated her good night.

She told herself as she walked almost blindly to her own room and closed the door behind her, absent-mindedly shooting the bolt as she did so, that he had even looked a little relieved. And the thought of that bit like an acid.

Long after she had crept into bed she lay looking into the darkness, despairing herself because her heart cried out to him—and her pride kept reminding her of the stories she had heard about Brooks and the Broadway actress he had wanted to marry, but who had refused because he was poor.

Of course, Natalie reminded herself grimly, she had only herself to blame for the present situation. She had known all along that Brooks didn't love her; that it had been her money that had brought him to her side. He hadn't made love to her except when she had all but forced it. She flushed guiltily to remember that she had practically proposed to him, scarlet with shame as she remembered the night when they had been out so very late at somebody's party and it had been almost dawn when they came home. She had laughed up at him in the fresh dawn light and said teasingly, "And now that I had been ruined my reputation, you'll have to make an honest woman of me, darling. I'm afraid you're trapped. I'm a designing female—or had you already guessed that?"

"You're a lovely one, anyway," Brooks had said, and kissed her. A gay, amused, teasing kiss. Only all of a sudden she had melted into his arms and the kiss had stopped being gay and teasing and had become demanding, urgent—

"You'd better marry me, Brooks," she had whispered, her voice shaken. "I'll probably sue you if you don't!"

Brooks had kissed her again and put her away from him, and had said almost sternly, "You don't want to marry me, Nat."

But she had refused to be put away. She had clung to him, lifting her face for his kisses. And she had said, her voice tender, "Who says I don't?"

Brooks' arms had tightened about her. "Natalie—DO you? Will you? No foolin'?"

"I do! I will! No foolin'!" she had told him breathlessly. And that had been that.

The engagement had been announced. The wedding date set. Parties started, people began to call up and ask all sorts of questions—and her friends began to gossip, of course. Brooks was all but penniless—two thousand a year, or some such beggarly sum; and she was so terribly rich. She hated herself suddenly because she was lying here in her lonely bridal bed with her face muffled against the pillows, crying as though her sore heart would break.

But she had herself well in hand the next morning when they resumed their journey. There were no traces of her tears, no trace of her heartbreak. She was cool and polished and smooth as a doll. Brooks greeted her with some light, amusing remark that set the tempo for their day.

Mr. And Mrs. Chris Palm Observe Marriage Date

Family Gathers To Help Celebrate Event

Mr. and Mrs. Chris Palm of East High Street observed their fiftieth wedding anniversary Tuesday at their home, a dinner being arranged in their honor by their daughters, Mrs. Irene Jenkins and Miss Nellie Palm.

Mr. and Mrs. Palm were married in Circleville and have been lifelong residents of the community.

A beautiful arrangement of gold and white spring flowers, a gift to Mrs. Palm from the Daughters of Union Veterans, centered the table where covers were placed for the noon dinner. A large wedding cake decorated in gold and white was another feature of the table decorations.

The guest list included Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Wilson, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Moore, Mrs. Mary Palm, Mrs. Nellie Palm, Mr. and Mrs. George Jenkins and daughter, Gwinn, and Mrs. Jennie Grabill. Many friends of Mr. and Mrs. Palm called during the informal open house which followed the family dinner.

Benevolent Association

The April meeting of the Circleville Benevolent Association held Tuesday in the city cottage was devoted to discussion of plans for health work of the organization and for a finance program for the coming year. Miss Florence Duntun was in the chair and appointed a health committee with Miss Clara Southward as chairman. Her assistants will be Mrs. C. E. Groce, Mrs. W. W. Robinson, Mrs. James L. Smith, Sr., Mrs. Henry S. Lewis, and Mrs. W. T. Um.

Mrs. Orville Trone was named chairman of the finance committee which is comprised of Mrs. William Gray, Mrs. Clark Will, Mrs. C. G. Stewart and Miss Marvene Howard.

Baked goods sales to be held the second Saturday of each month are included in the plans for the work, the first to be May 10. The place will be announced later.

Miss Southward, case worker, reported for March, with 22 working days to her credit although her job is supposed to be half-time.

She mentioned donations of food, clothing and other things from 25 individuals and seven organizations, the Zeta Sewing Club of the Methodist Church, the Storee Club, the W.C.T.U., St. Philip's Guild, the United Brethren Church, the Business and Professional Women's Club and the fire department.

Clothing and other articles were given to 78 families; 35 families were given food, and milk was supplied daily to 28 families.

From the supplies at the cottage were distributed: 22 pairs of shoes; 17 hats and 204 miscellaneous garments for men, women and children. The 149 miscellaneous articles given included bedding and various household supplies.

She said also that there were 12 names on the waiting list for mattresses, and that there are many requests for discarded curtains, deep dishes and pans. There is a constant demand for shoes.

Miss Southward also reported that 14 women are now busy making quilts and comforts from scraps which have been supplied by the association.

Home visits during the month totaled 82 with 18 calls in behalf of applicants. There were 178 office interviews with applicants and 62 interviews concerning their problems.

Otterbein Guild

The April session of the Otterbein Guild was held Tuesday at the home of Miss Mary Ellen Kirkpatrick of East Franklin Street, the service opening with the guild covenant, followed by prayer by Miss Lucille May.

After a short devotional service, the program in charge of Miss Betty Jane May opened with a piano prelude by Miss Kirkpatrick.

The study of "China" occupied the group, Miss Kirkpatrick having on display many interesting articles from that country, loaned

Circle 4

Circle 4 of the Woman's Society for Christian Service of the Methodist Church met Tuesday at the home of Mrs. Ned Harden, East Main Street, with 20 members and three guests, the Rev. and Mrs. Neil Peterson and Mrs. Howard McKee, present for the occasion.

The Easter program arranged by Mrs. Lloyd Sprouse opened with scripture reading by Mrs. Harold Pontius and prayer by Mrs. Malcolm Parrett. Mrs. Sprouse read the poem, "Resurrection Glory," followed by comments by the Rev. Mr. Peterson.

Mrs. Parrett, circle chairman, conducted the business session which opened with group singing of "Annie Laurie."

It was announced that the group would have an additional three months in which to work as the year would end December 31 instead of at the close of the conference year.

The hostess served delightful refreshments during the social hour.

Loyal Daughters' Class

Honoring Mrs. A. N. Gruesser on her birthday anniversary, members of the Loyal Daughters' Class of the United Brethren Church gathered at her home Tuesday and presented her a gift during the meeting.

The program opened with prayer by Miss Gladys Noggle and group singing of hymns. A duet, "Alone," was sung by Mrs. Walter Mavis and Mrs. Harry Radcliff. The Rev. A. N. Gruesser read Proverbs 10 for the scripture lesson, followed by a solo by Marilyn Sowers. Miss Noggle closed the devotionals with a prayer poem, "Making Life Bigger and Better."

Members of the nominating committee appointed during the business hour include Mrs. Stanley Goodman, chairman, Mrs. Carl Radcliff and Mrs. Howard Cook.

L. E. Stevenson was announced winner of the recent limerick contest, the judges being Mrs. George Marion, Miss Peggy Parks and Miss Elizabeth Tolbert of the Methodist Church.

The entertainment included contests in charge of Mrs. Arthur Ankrom, Mrs. George Ankrom and Mrs. Ezra Pritchard. Prizes were won by Miss Noggle, Mrs. Turney Ross and Mrs. Mavis.

A delightful lunch was served to 31 members and guests by Mrs. Samuel Steele, Mrs. Adolphus Pearce, Mrs. Fred Zwicker and Mrs. William Kendall.

Mr. And Mrs. Chris Palm Observe Marriage Date

Family Gathers To Help Celebrate Event

Mr. and Mrs. Chris Palm of East High Street observed their fiftieth wedding anniversary Tuesday at their home, a dinner being arranged in their honor by their daughters, Mrs. Irene Jenkins and Miss Nellie Palm.

Mr. and Mrs. Palm were married in Circleville and have been lifelong residents of the community. A beautiful arrangement of gold and white spring flowers, a gift to Mrs. Palm from the Daughters of Union Veterans, centered the table where covers were placed for the noon dinner. A large wedding cake decorated in gold and white was another feature of the table decorations.

The guest list included Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Wilson, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Moore, Mrs. Mary Palm, Mrs. Nellie Palm, Mr. and Mrs. George Jenkins and daughter, Gwynn, and Mrs. Jennie Grabill.

Many friends of Mr. and Mrs. Palm called during the informal open house which followed the family dinner.

Benevolent Association

The April meeting of the Circleville Benevolent Association held Tuesday in the city cottage was devoted to discussion of plans for health work of the organization and for a finance program for the coming year. Miss Florence Dunton was in the chair and appointed a health committee with Miss Clara Southward as chairman. Her assistants will be Mrs. C. E. Groce, Mrs. W. W. Robinson, Mrs. James I. Smith, Sr., Mrs. Henry S. Lewis, and Mrs. W. T. Uim.

Mrs. Orville Trone was named chairman of the finance committee which is comprised of Mrs. William Gray, Mrs. Clark Will, Mrs. C. G. Stewart and Miss Marvene Howard.

Baked goods sales to be held the second Saturday of each month are included in the plans for the work, the first to be May 10. The place will be announced later.

Miss Southward, case worker, reported for March, with 22 working days to her credit although her job is supposed to be half-time.

She mentioned donations of food, clothing and other things from 25 individuals and seven organizations, the Zeida Sewing Club of the Methodist Church, the Stodge Club, the W.C.T.U., St. Philip's Guild, the United Brethren Church, the Business and Professional Women's Club and the fire department.

Clothing and other articles were given to 78 families; 35 families were given food, and milk was supplied daily to 28 families.

From the supplies at the cottage were distributed: 22 pairs of shoes; 17 hats and 204 miscellaneous garments for men, women and children. The 149 miscellaneous articles given included bedding and various household supplies.

She said also that there were 12 names on the waiting list for mattresses, and that there are many requests for discarded curtains, deep dishes and pans. There is a constant demand for shoes.

Miss Southward also reported that 14 women are now busy making quilts and comforts from scraps which have been supplied by the association.

Home visits during the month totaled 82 with 18 calls in behalf of applicants. There were 178 office interviews with applicants and 62 interviews concerning their problems.

Otterbein Guild

The April session of the Otterbein Guild was held Tuesday at the home of Miss Mary Ellen Kirkpatrick of East Franklin Street, the service opening with the guild covenant, followed by prayer by Miss Lucille May.

After a short devotional service, the program in charge of Miss Betty Jane May opened with a piano prelude by Miss Kirkpatrick.

The study of "China" occupied the group, Miss Kirkpatrick having on display many interesting articles from that country, loaned

Circle 4

Circle 4 of the Woman's Society for Christian Service of the Methodist Church met Tuesday at the home of Mrs. Ned Harden, East Main Street, with 20 members and three guests, the Rev. and Mrs. Neil Peterson and Mrs. Howard McKee, present for the occasion.

The Easter program arranged by Mrs. Lloyd Sprouse opened with scripture reading by Mrs. Harold Pontius and prayer by Mrs. Malcolm Parrett. Mrs. Sprouse read the poem, "Resurrection Glory", followed by comments by the Rev. Mr. Peterson.

Mrs. Parrett, circle chairman, conducted the business session which opened with group singing of "Annie Laurie".

It was announced that the group would have an additional three months in which to work as the year would end December 31 instead of at the close of the conference year.

The hostess served delightful refreshments during the social hour.

Loyal Daughters' Class

Honoring Mrs. A. N. Gruesser on her birthday anniversary, members of the Loyal Daughters' Class of the United Brethren Church gathered at her home Tuesday and presented her a gift during the meeting.

The program opened with prayer by Miss Gladys Noggle and group singing of hymns. A duet, "Alone", was sung by Mrs. Walter Mavis and Mrs. Harry Radcliff. The Rev. A. N. Gruesser read Proverbs 10 for the scripture lesson, followed by a solo by Marilyn Sowers. Miss Noggle closed the devotionals with a prayer poem, "Making Life Bigger and Better."

Members of the nominating committee appointed during the business hour include Mrs. Stanley Goodman, chairman, Mrs. Carl Radcliff and Mrs. Howard Cook.

L. E. Stevenson was announced winner of the recent limerick contest, the judges being Mrs. George Marion, Miss Peggy Parks and Miss Elizabeth Tolbert of the Methodist Church.

The entertainment included contests in charge of Mrs. Arthur Ankrom. Mrs. George Ankrom and Mrs. Ezra Pritchard. Prizes were won by Miss Noggle, Mrs. Turney Ross and Mrs. Mavis.

A delightful lunch was served to 31 members and guests by Mrs. Samuel Steele, Mrs. Adolphus Pearce, Mrs. Fred Zwicker and Mrs. William Kendall.

Lou Gehrig Still Eyes Chances For Comeback

NEW YORK, April 9—Gone from the game but not forgotten, Henry Louis Gehrig silently indicated today that, next to regaining his robust health, his burning ambition is to get back in baseball. "Get back in the game?" he said, repeating a reporter's inquiries. "Well, let's not talk about it now."

Seated behind his desk in the parole commission office, Gehrig gazed thoughtfully out the window and added:

"When you haven't your health, you can't plan too many things ahead."

These were the words of baseball's iron man who played 2,130 games in a row—a record for durability—only to have his career suddenly snapped two years ago by illness. Soon after his retirement as first baseman of the New York Yankees, Lou was appointed city parole commissioner.

He said he likes his profession, but lying open there on his desk was a sports page, disclosing the latest Yankee box score.

"Yes sir," he said, "this surely looks like the year for the Yanks to come back." With the enthusiasm of a wide-eyed rookie, Lou recounted the spring performances of his ex-teammates and pronounced Bill Dickey a sure-shot to start hitting again at a hard clip.

But this was not a rookie speaking. It was not even the Gehrig who batted in 100 or more runs for 13 years in a row. Lou has lost weight. Grey streaks his dark hair, and, while his dimpled cheeks remain rosy, a pallor strange to the Gehrig countenance prevails.

"The doctors tell me," he explained, "there's no way of knowing just when I'll get better. They tell me to conserve my strength, get as much rest as I can and take treatments. I follow their orders like you'd obey signals when at bat."

BOSTON, April 9—Eddie Collins, general manager of the Boston Red Sox, revealed today that Ted Williams, injured outfielder, probably would start the season with the Scarlet Hose. Williams was sent here from Birmingham after an examination there disclosed he had suffered a chipped ankle bone during a spring exhibition game. Collins reported, however, that further examination showed the condition not to be as serious as at first believed.

CHARLEY WAGNER and Mickey Harris, two Red Sox rookies, shut the Reds out with four hits, two of which were garnered by First Baseman Frank McCormick.

WASHINGTON, April 9—Buddy Baer, younger brother of Madcap Maxie, today loomed as a possible member of heavyweight Champ Joe Louis "fight a month club" after scoring somewhat of a technical knockout over Two-Ton Tony Galento, the animated New Jersey beer-barrel.

The rough-house brawl last night was stopped when Galento failed to leave his stool for the seventh round, screaming that his left hand was broken.

The roly-poly Galento, who entered the ring with a big spare tire around his middle, was ordered to Casualty Hospital by boxing commission officials for an examination of his hand. He refused and the commission ordered his 27½ percent cut of the $21,500 gate held until the hand is x-rayed.

Dr. Marvin McLean, of the commission staff, made a quick examination of Tony's hand after the fight and said he saw no evidence at that time of any broken bones.

After taking six rounds of terrific punishment from the junior Baer, Galento returned to his corner where his seconds began cutting the glove off. Referee Eddie Lafond's call for time was lost in the clang of the bell for the seventh. Baer lunged at Tony, still sitting on the stool, and when he wheezed a cry through his cut and bleeding face that his hand was broken, Lafond ended the fight.

24 Jurors to be Called For Manslaughter Trial

First Criminal Action In Pickaway County Since 1939 Scheduled

DAYTON MAN DEFENDANT

Crash Fatal To Two Young Persons Basis For Court Case

A Pickaway County petit jury will be called next Wednesday to hear the first criminal trial since September, 1939, in the county.

The second degree manslaughter case involves Andrew Mack Wright, Dayton motorist, charged with being responsible for the death of Miss Catherine Stapleton and Millard Campbell, both of Circleville, in a head-on crash on Route 56 east of the city. Wright has two charges of manslaughter against him, one filed by Miss Stapleton's relatives and one by Campbell's parents. Next Wednesday's case will concern only the charges filed in connection with Miss Stapleton's death.

Miss Stapleton was killed almost instantly in the collision with the Wright car. Campbell died in Berger Hospital some time later. Wright is free under bond and will be defended by Frank Redfern of Adelphi. Joseph Adkins, appointed assistant to the prosecutor by the court, will try the case for the state. Both Adkins and Redfern have told Common Pleas Judge Meeker Terwilliger they are anxious to dispose of the case, which originally was scheduled for February 17 and then postponed on request of both attorneys.

Judge Terwilliger has instructed the clerk of courts to send notices Friday to 24 of the list of 35 January term petit jurors to appear at the court house Wednesday. The 24 to be summoned in the case are Dennis Brinker, Walnut Township; Alice Walters, Jackson Township; Gardner Moore Jr., Circleville; Denny Shelby, Circleville; Raymond Reiterman, Monroe Township; Gardner Welsh, Harrison Township; Charles Gusman, Circleville; Frank Barnhart, Circleville; Fred Prushing, Scioto Township; Charles Parks, Monroe Township; Caroline Stevenson, Jackson Township; Mrs. Elmer Wolf, Circleville; Charles Trone, Walnut Township; Lee Winks, Jackson Township; Mrs. Jessie Pitt, Muhlenberg Township; Mrs. R. G. Riddle, Darby Township; A. C. Skinner, Darby Township; L. M. Culp, Circleville; Marvin Rhoads, Jackson Township; Lulu Rasor, Scioto Township; Austin Dowden, Wayne Township; John Athey, Perry Township; Elizabeth Nance, Harrison Township; and Paul W. Beers, Scioto Township.

AMENDMENT GIVES PERSON RIGHT TO CHANGE TEETH

COLUMBUS, April 9—A last-minute amendment inserted in a bill passed by the House yesterday makes it legal for a person to remove and insert his own false teeth.

When the bill, sponsored by the Ohio Dental Society, and designed to prevent dental laboratories from advertising, selling and fitting dentures, came up for passage, it was discovered that it contained a provision that no one other than a licensed dentist could place false teeth in the mouth of any person.

In mock alarm, Rep. Gordon L. Renner (R-Hamilton) arose to protest that he would be compelled to take up the study of dentistry and obtain a license before he could adjust his own denture. An amendment was hastily inserted to correct the oversight.

OUSTED OFFICIAL BACK ON JOB IN WAPAKONETA

WAPAKONETA, April 9—Ordered removed from office ten days ago by Auglaize County Probate Judge Harry F. Wittenbrink, George Anderegg today was re-appointed safety service director of Wapakoneta. His removal had been ordered after he was found guilty of malfeasance charges.

Anderegg later was exonerated of this charge by a special probate jury, but the removal order was issued in connection with a complainant motion for a directed judgment notwithstanding the verdict returned by the jury.

House Ballot on Ohio Money Bill Scheduled

COLUMBUS, April 9—The House today was to vote on the $351,867,919 biennium appropriation bill, winding up the Bricker administration's financial program for the current session.

While Democrats were expected to register formal protests against numerous items in the budget measure, minority leaders admitted privately that no real opposition will be attempted because of the futility of making an effective stand against the Republican majority.

Predictions of an early adjournment were being made meanwhile, since previous Legislatures have made a practice of going home in some instances from ten days to two weeks after the passage of the appropriation bill. Only a few of the approximately 1,000 bills pending in various House and Senate committees are expected to be brought out for a vote.

Several measures were passed by both houses yesterday. These included the King bill, passed by the Senate without a dissenting vote, extending for two years the .65 percent utilities excise tax for poor relief purposes. This was the last bill on the administration's tax program, and has already been passed by the House.

Continued federal contributions to the state fund for the aid to the aged was assured with the Senate's passage of the Phillips bill, bringing Ohio laws in conformity with the Social Security Act and repealing the provision of the existing law which has placed a 5 percent penalty on pension recipients who fail to transfer their real estate in trust to the state. The measure now goes to the House where no opposition is expected. The Senate gave it a unanimous vote.

Race Bill Beaten

Most of the Senate's session yesterday was devoted to debate on the controversial race track bill, authorized by Sen. Grant P. Ward (R-Columbus), which was defeated by a vote of 12 to 18 with six Republicans joining a dozen Democrats in opposing it. A subsequent motion to reconsider the measure was tabled.

The bill would have required race tracks to install totalizers, which would have placed running races under more rigid state regulation and increased the state's share of each day's wagers. Race track interests had fought the bill in committee, charging that the cost of installing the totalizers would prove ruinous and virtually end racing in Ohio.

The House passed the Marshall bill, sponsored by the Ohio Dental Society, which would bar non-citizens from the practice of dentistry in the state and forbid advertising and sale of dentures by manufacturers to anyone except dentists.

A resolution was offered in the House by Rep. Joseph C. Nailor (R-Columbus), proposing that the judiciary committee draft a bill to require the distribution of sales tax stamps through public agencies only. A recent Franklin County common pleas court ruling enjoined the state from paying commissions to private persons distributing tax stamps to merchants.

CIO Protests

CIO objections to the bill to establish an Ohio state guard to replace the federalized militia resulted yesterday in a further delay on the measure which is in the hands of the House military affairs committee. The bill was sent back to a sub-committee for reconsideration after Ted Silvey, secretary of the CIO Industrial Council of Ohio protested the extent of military powers that would be granted the guard.

A crowded Senate committee room yesterday heard final arguments on the bill which would reduce Ohio's small loan rates and place the small loan business under stricter state regulation. The banks and loans committee completed its public hearings on the measure with yesterday's session, the fifth, but deferred a vote pending further consideration.

Measures passed by the House included a Senate bill to authorize Miami County commissioners to accept the gift of a hospital through the will of the late Jacob G. Dettner and to submit a one mill levy for maintenance at a special election.

The House also passed a bill to change the method of measuring commercial fishing gill nets by providing a one pound test, and another to require non-residents to purchase licenses for each of the two fishing seasons on Lake Erie.

The Senate passed a bill to advance by 60 days all statutes related to budgets, delivery of real estate duplicates, and the opening, closing and settlement of taxes. Another bill passed unanimously would permit Veterans of Foreign Wars to have special license plates on their automobiles.

Teachers' Retirement

New measures introduced in the Senate included a bill by Sen. H. T. Phillips (R-Athens) to increase from $25 to $50 the minimum retirement allowance for teachers with 36 or more years of service, and a bill by Sen. Robert H. Hoffman (R-Franklin) to reduce from three years to two the time limit for carriers filing actions. A bill by Sen. Gray would authorize the superintendent of public works to lease canal lands to the Piqua, O., YMCA for one dollar.

Race Bill Beaten
Most of the Senate's session yesterday was devoted to debate on the controversial race track bill, authorized by Sen. Grant P. Ward (R-Columbus), which was defeated by a vote of 12 to 18 with six Republicans joining a dozen Democrats in opposing it. A subsequent motion to reconsider the measure was tabled.

The bill would have required race tracks to install totalizers, would have placed running races under more rigid state regulation and increased the state's share of each day's wagers. Race track interests had fought the bill in committee, charging that the cost of installing the totalizers would prove ruinous and virtually end racing in Ohio.

The House passed the Marshall bill, sponsored by the Ohio Dental Society, which would bar non-citizens from the practice of dentistry in the state and forbid advertising and sale of dentures by manufacturers to anyone except dentists.

A resolution was offered in the House by Rep. Joseph C. Nailor (R-Columbus), proposing that the judiciary committee draft a bill to require the distribution of sales tax stamps through public agencies only. A recent Franklin County common pleas court ruling enjoined the state from paying commissions to private persons distributing tax stamps to merchants.

CIO Protests
CIO objections to the bill to establish an Ohio state guard to replace the federalized militia resulted yesterday in a further delay on the measure which is in the hands of the House military affairs committee. The bill was sent back to a sub-committee for reconsideration after Ted Silvey, secretary of the CIO Industrial Council of Ohio protested the extent of military powers that would be granted the guard.

A crowded Senate committee room yesterday heard final arguments on the bill which would reduce Ohio's small loan rates and place the small loan business under stricter state regulation. The banks and loans committee completed its public hearings on the measure with yesterday's session, the fifth, but deferred a vote pending further consideration.

Measures passed by the House included a Senate bill to authorize Miami County commissioners to accept the gift of a hospital through the will of the late Jacob G. Dettner and to submit a one mill levy for maintenance at a special election.

The House also passed a bill to change the method of measuring commercial fishing gill nets by providing a one pound test, and another to require non-residents to purchase licenses for each of the two fishing seasons on Lake Erie.

The Senate passed a bill to advance by 60 days all statutes related to budgets, delivery of real estate duplicates, and the opening, closing and settlement of taxes. Another bill passed unanimously would permit Veterans of Foreign Wars to have special license plates on their automobiles.

Teachers' Retirement
New measures introduced in the Senate included a bill by Sen. H. T. Phillips (R-Athens) to increase from $25 to $50 the minimum retirement allowance for teachers with 36 or more years of service, and a bill by Sen. Robert H. Hoffman (R-Franklin) to reduce from three years to two the time limit for carriers filing actions. A bill by Sen. Gray would authorize the superintendent of public works to lease canal lands to the Piqua, O., YMCA for one dollar.

One of the big towns finds that smoke costs it $20,000,000 a year. And smoking probably costs still more, but we'd better not go into that.
